Business district revitalization plan supported

Downtown Arlington Heights merchants and property owners and a Chicago real estate developer Thursday enthusiastically supported phase one of a central business district revitalization project.

The fourteen merchants and property owners who attended the plan commission meeting heard village Planner Joseph Kesler detail a proposed nine-story shopping mall-office complex and parking garage. They voiced support for its immediate construction.

Greg Heine, vice president of Crane Construction Co., Chicago, whom Kesler said is one of the developers interested in the project, said, "I'm interested enough in it to be here and I haven't even had my dinner yet."

CRANE WAS the only one of five companies Kesler said have expressed interest in the project that sent a representative to the meeting.

"I want to substantiate the fact that the work that has been done on this project is enough to make serious developers serious about it," Heine said. "We are trying to get a pulse on how your village feels about this and will continue to look into it because we believe there are prospects of good success for everyone involved."

Heine disagreed with Kesler's prediction that construction could begin by next summer. "I think Mr. Kesler is a bit optimistic about that," he said.

The project, if approved by the village board, will be built on a block bounded by Campbell Street, Dunton Avenue, Sigwalt Street and Vail Avenue on land owned by the village.

A 200-CAR parking garage adjacent to the mall would be built with $1.5 million in revenue bonds.

Village planners predict the shops and offices would generate $133,512 in real estate and sales taxes.

A key provision of the project is the modification of existing parking requirements which now demand one space for every 300 square feet on the first floor of a retail store or bank and one space for every 500 square feet of first floor office room.

"The parking requirement, in my opinion, is almost ridiculous," Kesler said. "If applied to this project we would need 700 spaces. This requirement is the number one reason we have had such a stagnant downtown for the last 12 years."

SOME MERCHANTS and property owners agreed.

"I CERTAINLY concur that this has been the reason we haven't had any new businesses in downtown Arlington Heights," Donald Morton of the Arlington Heights Federal Savings and Loan said.

"But I am concerned," he said, "that whatever new parking requirements we come up with specify that the spaces don't have to be provided on site."

"Our intention," Kesler said, "is that some percentage would be required on site and the rest in a garage or lot elsewhere."

FIRE IS NOT a funny business, but teaching youngsters the danger of playing with matches and how to report fires is best done with a little clowning around. Children at the Early Learning Center, 33 W. Thomas Ave., are given a quick lesson by the Arlington Heights Fire Dept. as part of Fire Prevention Week. More than 30 Arlington Heights schools will be visited this week and open houses are planned at all fire stations tonight and Saturday afternoon.

Ford backtracks on Soviet 'domination' remarks

by United Press International
Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil.

"This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryan Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

"It's so evident that the whole of Eastern Europe is under Soviet domination," he said.

Maintains hefty lead over Carter

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer
A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 340 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1966 vote in the area.

Most professional pollsters agree that splitting the undivided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 46.8 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 33.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained (Continued on Page 9)

Nationwide heroin smuggling operation

by TONI GINETTI

Two Des Plaines men were among 31 persons indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury in connection with what federal authorities are calling a "major" nationwide Mexican heroin smuggling operation.

The two, Adrian Garcia, 23, and Nazario Garcia, 31, both of 2711 N. Mannheim Rd., were named in the indictments that came in the wake of what U.S. Atty. Samuel K. Skinner called the "second largest seizure of Mexican heroin in the history of this nation."

The seizure of 28 pounds of heroin, which Skinner said was intended for the Chicago area and East coast came Friday night in Eagle Pass, Tex., through a cooperative effort by the U.S. Justice Dept., U.S. Customs Office, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and Mexican authorities.

The heroin, which authorities said has a street value of $13 million, was the second largest cache ever confiscated by federal agents. The largest seizure, of about 40 pounds of heroin, was made earlier this year in California, Skinner said.

The Garcias are charged in a four-count indictment with conspiracy to distribute heroin and with the distribution of approximately 2.3 pounds of heroin.

The two were arrested in Chicago, said George R. Halpin, deputy regional director of the drug enforcement agency. Halpin said the amount of heroin the two are charged with distribution was substantial. "They would have asked $80,000 wholesale from undercover agents (for the amount)," he said.

Others named in the indictment include 23 Chicagoans, three Aurora men and three persons whose addresses are unknown.

Skinner said the accused, if convicted, face a maximum of 15 years in jail and a $25,000 fine on each count.

"This represents the culmination of our efforts with both the drug enforcement agents and the customs agents and my counterpart in Texas," Skinner said. He said about 123 pounds of brown heroin has been seized in the Chicago area since May 1.

The narcotics arrests are part of a nationwide federal effort to destroy the so-called "Mexican connection." That effort is being coordinated by the Drug Enforcement Agency under the title Operation Heroin B, Skinner said.

The effort is concentrated on heroin smuggling operations that use Chicago and Los Angeles as the primary delivery centers from where heroin is distributed to the rest of the nation, he said.

"Anyone who thinks that the U.S. government is not doing anything about the Mexican heroin problem and anyone who thinks the Mexican government is not doing anything about the Mexican heroin problem is wrong," Skinner said.

But Skinner admitted that although Chicago "leads the nation in seizures and arrests," the heroin problem continues to be grave.

"All we're doing at the federal level is arresting the distribution of heroin," he said. "The answer, I think, has to lie with a medical answer. There are 400,000 Americans addicted to heroin. We have to find a medical answer to the problem."

"I think we're doing a good job, but we have an awful lot of work to do. I don't think we've turned the corner yet," he said.

Skinner said the Justice Dept. is continuing to cooperate with Mexican authorities and the Drug Enforcement Agency in a 10-point antiheroin program that includes Operation Heroin B.

Four assistant U.S. attorneys, including Michael J. Higgins, Thomas K. McQueen, William J. Cook and Lewis M. Nixon, coordinated information and evidence presented to the grand jury that returned the indictments.

Nationwide, about 255 suspects were arrested in the crackdown in 34 U.S. cities, the Drug Enforcement Administration announced.

DEA administrator Peter B. Benninger said at noon the arrests were continuing. He said agents also seized 20 kilograms of brown heroin worth $20 million at street prices.

The impact might well mean lowering the present 400 monthly fatality rate from heroin overdoses, reduced addiction and reduced crime as the scarcer heroin is sold in weakened form at higher prices, he said.

Brown heroin from South American sources has recently been widely substituted for the traditional white heroin. Supplies of the more highly refined white heroin dwindled because of lowered opium poppy production in Turkey, seizure of the Marseille "laboratories" where it was purified, and heavy international crackdowns on the established smuggling routes from abroad.

Earlier phases in the DEA program brought about 1,300 arrests and the seizure of 600 pounds of heroin — with a $300 million retail value — one aircraft, over $700,000 in cash, nearly 300 vehicles and over 200 firearms, Benninger said.

U.S. ATTORNEY Samuel Skinner looks at 28-pounds of brown Mexican heroin valued at $13 million during news conference in Chicago. Skinner said the heroin was seized at Eagle Pass, Tex. It was destined for Chicago. The Drug Enforcement Administration in Washington announced the arrest of more than 255 suspects in a crackdown Thursday.

Possible Cuban jet sabotage probed

A team of Cuban aviation experts arrived in Barbados Thursday to assist local authorities investigating possible sabotage in the crash of a Cuban Airlines DC8 that killed 73 persons, including 16 members of Cuba's championship fencing team. The plane, flight 455 enroute to Jamaica and Havana, nosedived into the Caribbean three miles off the coast of Barbados Wednesday afternoon only 20 minutes after it took off from Bridgetown's Seawall Airport. Barbadian airport authorities said pilot Wilfredo Perez warned the Seawall control tower that he had "mechanical problems," but Federal Aviation authorities in Washington said there was an "in-flight explosion" and Barbadian government sources said Thursday sabotage was suspected.

Rhodesian bridge bombed, train wrecked

Black nationalist guerrillas blew up a concrete-and-steel railroad bridge as an ore train rumbled across the Matetsi River, Rhodesian security forces said Thursday. Eleven freight cars plunged into the river gorge and a 70-foot section of the bridge was destroyed, but two engineers aboard the train escaped injury. Their locomotive had passed beyond the spot where the bomb was planted, railway officials said. The engine was derailed but kept its perch on the high bridge. Rhodesia's army commander in a speech several hours after the blast said African Communists, particularly the Marxist regime in Mozambique, are helping escalate guerrilla activity against Western plans for a peaceful transition to black majority rule.

Massive Syrian troop movement reported

Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas reported massive Syrian troop movements in south Lebanon Thursday and declared a state of maximum alert in the Biblical port of Sidon. The leftist-held Beirut radio said that Sidon "has been turned into a fortified castle" with street barricades and "checkpoints on every corner." In preparation for an expected armored offensive to break guerrilla resistance, a "maximum military alert" was declared following what leftist spokesmen said were "massive movements of Syrian troops" from the eastern Bekaa Valley toward Jezzine, 14 miles west of Sidon.

French austerity program protested

An estimated 500,000 French workers marched against the government's austerity program Thursday in the largest demonstration since the student-worker rebellion of 1968 which led to the resignation of President Charles de Gaulle. The marches climaxed a 24-hour general strike call against a government program to battle France's 13 per cent inflation through price and wage restraints. In the only reported incident, several marchers charged four non-striking bus drivers who had stopped to let the parade go by. March marshals headed off the would-be attackers and coaxed them back into the line of march. Labor unions said more than half a million people marched.

Assassination probe may require years

The chief counsel for a House committee which will reinvestigate the assassinations of John Kennedy and Martin Luther King said Thursday the inquiry may require a matter of years. Richard Sprague, who helped with the successful murder prosecution of former United Mine Workers president W. A. Boyle, gave the assessment as he was sworn in as acting counsel and director of the House Select Committee on Assassinations. "You cannot do it by deadline," said Sprague. "A homicide investigation is an intensive job . . . It has to be recognized by everyone that work of this nature should be thought of in terms of years." He said the investigations will be conducted separately but simultaneously, with a different staff for each. For his part, he said, he will not hesitate to use subpoenas or to travel anywhere — including Cuba — in search of evidence.

Beame renews police contract talks

Mayor Abraham Beame's administration renewed contract talks Thursday with the union representing police officers following an angry all-night demonstration by off-duty cops. Four off-duty policemen were arrested by brother officers Wednesday night, the first taken into custody since the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association took to the streets Sept. 24 to publicize its members' anger with a new work schedule and refusal of the city to provide a retroactive 6 per cent pay raise in a new pact. Hours after a raucous demonstration broke up, First Deputy Mayor John Zucotti agreed to meet with PBA President Douglas Weaving for "preliminary talks" on the union's demands. A mayoral spokesman emphasized, however, that the city cannot provide funds beyond those already earmarked for a new contract.

Postal service ends year in good shape

The Postal Service announced Thursday that independent accountants have found it ended the 1976 fiscal year in $300 million better shape than had been expected. The just-completed audits for the period ended June 30 showed the Postal Service had a deficit of $1.176 billion. Initial estimates exceeded that by $200 million. Postmaster General Benjamin F. Baller said vigorous cost-control, a postal rate increase and economy improvements that led to increased mail volume — all occurring between Jan. 1 and June 30 — improved the financial situation.

Humphrey cancer surgery a success

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey underwent an apparently successful operation for bladder cancer Thursday, his doctors said.

Dr. Edgar Berman, Humphrey's personal physician, told a news conference at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, where the surgery was performed, "I'm tremendously relieved that the senator . . . has come through this procedure extremely well."

"It actually went off without a hitch," Berman said, "and I just hope the convalescence comes out as well."

Dr. Willet F. Whitmore, the attending surgeon and chief of the hospital's urology department, said, "As far as we're concerned the patient is cured." But he added that doctors would know better when the final pathology report on the surgery is available in five days to one week.

Whitmore said the six-hour operation, which ended at 3 p.m., involved the removal of Humphrey's entire bladder, his prostate gland, nearby lymph nodes and the part of the urethra directly connected to the bladder.

In addition, Whitmore said, a portion of the senator's intestine was removed and used as a tube to eliminate urine from his body, to be caught in a sac which he will wear on his abdomen.

Whitmore said he spoke with Humphrey about 4 p.m. and described the three-time presidential contender as "awake and alert."

He called the operation "uneventful," and added, "As far as we can tell, all the tumor was removed."

Asked if Humphrey, one of the nation's most active politicians, can re-enter political life without trouble, Whitmore said, "There is no reason from a surgical standpoint why this can't happen."

He said the only restriction on patients after operations of this kind are contact sports.

Whitmore said Humphrey will continue to have regular checkups on the success of the operation and may undergo "adjunct chemotherapy," depending on the results of the pathology report.

The Minnesota Democrat entered the hospital Monday for a series of preparatory tests. His wife, Muriel, who visited him for the last time before surgery Wednesday night, has been staying at an apartment across the street from the hospital.

The 63-year-old former vice president was referred to the hospital on the basis of tests conducted at the Bethesda (Md.) Naval Center outside Washington which indicated cancer.

At a news conference Monday, Humphrey's doctor, Willet F. Whitmore, said those tests showed a malignant tumor on the senator's bladder which was "not amenable to simple removal" and that "in all probability it will mean total removal of the bladder."

Israel ready for Geneva peace talks

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israel is ready to join another Middle East conference in Geneva, Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said Thursday, and willing to negotiate an arms ceiling with its Arab neighbors even before a peace plan is reached.

In a policy speech to the General Assembly, Allon said Israel believes the Geneva conference and Security Council resolutions dating back to the 1967 war are the only bases for peace in the Middle East.

But he also criticized the United Nations' lack of action to save lives in Lebanon, whose civil war has left it "bleeding to death in the sight of the whole world."

"A country which relies on the United Nations for its security, a country which cannot defend itself by its own means, is lost," Allon said.

Lebanon's war has destroyed the "beautiful mirage" of proposals for a Palestinian state replacing Israel in which Moslems, Christians and Jews would live "in blissful amity," he said.

Repeating his country's refusal to join any session that includes the Palestine Liberation Organization, Allon said Israel was ready to negotiate "a final peace settlement based on a fair compromise" that would give it secure borders and satisfy genuine Arab interests.

This should include a "just and constructive solution to the problem of Palestinian Arab identity" in conjunction with a settlement with Jordan, which has more than a million Palestinians, he said.

Allon said Middle East countries have received $7.5 billion worth of arms from the East and West in the past three years, and three times as many weapons are on order.

"As long as the Arab states continue to arm themselves with highly sophisticated modern weaponry on this vast scale, Israel is compelled to keep up, and will keep up," he said.

"But we repeat emphatically that we are prepared, now, even before peace is made, to negotiate with our neighbors for a balanced limitation of the inflow of arms . . . without affecting adversely the security and defensive capacity of any."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said last week it appears the time has come for "comprehensive solutions" in the Middle East.

Thailand's deposed ruler released

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Thailand's new military rulers released deposed Prime Minister Seni Pramoj Thursday and ended the mid-night-to-dawn curfew. They told newspapers they may be allowed to reopen in three days if they pledge a firm anti-Communist line.

The rector of Thammasat University, scene of bloody battles that killed at least 27 persons and wounded 100 others before the Wednesday coup, was released from custody and left the country for London. It was not clear if he was expelled.

More than 1,300 leftwing students were arrested at the university, authorities said, including the leadership of the National Students Center of Thailand which sponsored violent anti-government protests that led to the coup. The students denounced Seni's government for its failure to move against former dictator Thanom Kittikachorn, who returned from exile in Singapore last month.

Thanom, who re-entered Thailand as a Buddhist monk, has had no comment on the military takeover.

A burst of submachine gun fire Thursday night sent pedestrians scrambling for cover near the university. Security forces said it was a "misunderstanding."

Army jeeps carrying heavy machine guns patrolled Bangkok's streets.

The new government of Adm. Sangad Chaloroon, which calls itself the National Evolutionary Administration Council, summoned the heads of all diplomatic missions, including U.S. Charge d'Affaires John Burke, for a briefing and an outline of the new regime's foreign policy plans.

Family sources said Seni, who reportedly is a friend of Sangad, was released after spending the night in protective custody. He was "invited" to supreme military headquarters Wednesday an hour before the coup leaders abolished the constitution and dissolved the government and parliament.

Sangad's new administration, which shut down all newspapers in the country, told editors Thursday they will be subject to precensorship if publication is permitted, and they must "support democracy and the throne" and take a firm anti-Communist line.

There was speculation some of Bangkok's more than 30 English, Thai and Chinese newspapers will be denied permission to reopen.

Butz not welcome in Mississippi: Evers

Civil rights leader Charles Evers said Thursday former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz is "not welcome in Mississippi" and blacks will picket his scheduled appearance in the Delta Friday afternoon.

Veteran balloonist Edward Yeat, carried along by western breezes under his lowering "Silver Fox" was reported a third of the way across the Atlantic in his attempt to become the first man to successfully cross the ocean in a balloon. Yeat, who designs and manufactures hot air balloons from his Sioux Falls, S.D. factory, was about 250 miles east northeast of Gander, Newfoundland in his helium balloon Thursday.

Yugoslavia said Thursday President Josip Broz Tito, 84, is successfully recuperating and recovering from a liver ailment contacted last month.

Ford misstated position: Rocky

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said in Chicago Thursday President Ford misstated his position on Eastern Europe during his debate with Jimmy Carter. "In the heat of a debate, sometimes you're trying to say one thing and it comes out as though you said something else," Rockefeller said. "What he was thinking is that the people of Eastern Europe should not be under the influence of the Soviet Union." Rockefeller, talking to reporters during a $1,000-a-plate salute to the President dinner, said the Eastern European statement should not hurt Ford's campaign because he has issued a statement clarifying it.

He said Carter has "clarified" his position on taxes and on the criticism he made of Lyndon Johnson in an interview with Playboy magazine. When Ford said the eastern Europeans were not under Soviet domination, "he doesn't mean it," Rockefeller said. "If you're talking to 50 million people, that can affect you, know what I mean?" "It's not easy," Rockefeller said. "When you're right there with a gun on you, it's not so easy." Rockefeller also said Ford did not know that the Commerce Dept. had promised companies it would not make public the names of those which cooperated with the Arab boycott of Israel. "I don't think the President knew that when he made the statement," Rockefeller said. "I'm sure what he said was what he thought."

RTA gives $9 million only to CTA

The Regional Transportation Authority board decided Thursday to grant only $9 million of a proposed $34.7 million six-month grant to the Chicago Transit Authority. The board also approved a purchase of service contract for $7.55 million to the bankrupt Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad for commuter service operations. The board slashed its proposed subsidy to the CTA on learning that the City of Chicago has filed to approve $3 million in subsidies to the CTA as required by law.

Another $3 million that state law requires Cook County to chip in each year has been paid, RTA officials said. Chicago board member Patrick O'Malley requested the $9 million figure as a compromise to enable the CTA to meet its payroll this month.

The Rock Island's bankruptcy trustee, William Gibbons, and RTA officials were expected to sign the purchase-of-service agreement Friday. The board also approved temporary grants to nine suburban bus operators.

38 arrested for carrying guns

Chicago police arrested 38 persons this year for trying to carry guns on to airplanes at O'Hare International Airport, a federal report showed Thursday. The report, issued by the Federal Aviation Administration, also said O'Hare police confiscated 1,800 weapons during the year. Nationwide, airport passenger screening programs resulted in 422 arrests.

Police Capt. James Connolly, who is on the pre-flight screening detail, said anyone found with a gun at O'Hare is automatically arrested.

Illinois briefs

Thompson tax plan hit by Big 3 Dems

Illinois "big three" Democratic party leaders Thursday criticized James R. Thompson for his stand on taxes and praised Jimmy Carter for his performance in the second presidential debate. Gov. Daniel Walker flew around the state, charging GOP gubernatorial candidate Thompson plans to raise taxes. Thompson denied the charge. Walker and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley both said they feel Carter beat President Ford in this week's debate. And Democratic gubernatorial candidate Michael J. Howlett Thursday told a Springfield audience he can fully fund the school aid formula without raising taxes.

Thompson spent the day campaigning in the Chicago area, with stops at senior citizen centers and an antique enthusiasts' convention. Walker charged during his seven-city flying tour that Thompson has a "package" of tax measures for consideration next year. He based the charge on a Chicago Sun-Times story which quoted Thompson as saying he "envisions approval in the next term of a 'package' of taxes" to replace the personal property tax. The Illinois Constitution requires that the personal property tax be abolished by January, 1979, and replaced with other taxes paid by the same group which now pays the property tax.

Court rulings support village in Viator case: Siegel

Three racial discrimination, housing and zoning cases decided in recent months by the U.S. Supreme Court support the Village of Arlington Heights in its refusal to rezone property near St. Viator High School for a low-income housing project, according to the village attorney.

The three high court rulings are the basis of a supplemental legal brief filed recently by Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel before next week's Supreme Court hearing on the case between Arlington Heights and the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp.

Oral arguments before the court tentatively are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday, bringing to a close the five-year-old legal battle in which the village has blocked the MHDC from building a 180-unit townhouse development called Lincoln Green.

A brief filed with the court Monday by attorneys for MHDC attempts to rebut Siegel's supplemental arguments.

THE CASE WAS appealed to the Supreme Court after the 7th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled against the village in June, 1975, on the basis that its refusal to rezone the 15-acre parcel southeast of the high school would have racially discriminatory effects.

Siegel argues in his brief that the Arlington Heights-MHDC case should be considered a zoning issue and says the Hills vs. Gautreaux case decided in April, 1976, indicates local zoning must be upheld.

That case gives courts authority to order federally funded, low-income housing in the suburbs to relieve intercity segregation. But Siegel points out the written decision in that case gives local governments the right "to reject certain proposals that are inconsistent with their approved housing plans."

Zoning and other land-use restrictions must be adhered to, according to the Supreme Court decision.

Siegel also refers to a Washington, D.C. vs. Davis case from June, 1976, in which the court ruled that proof of purpose is needed to constitute a violation of the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

THE WRITTEN decision for that case even mentions the Arlington Heights-MHDC case as one of 16 lower court decisions with which it disagrees.

"The unquestionable conclusion to be drawn from these decisions is that, in the absence of proof of purposeful racial discrimination, the mere fact a greater percentage of blacks might occupy Lincoln Green than other housing in Arlington Heights is insufficient to invalidate the zoning ordinances of the village as it affected the subject property," Siegel's brief states.

No racial motive or discriminatory practice was proven, he says.

Willis Caruso, attorney for MHDC, rejects Siegel's new arguments and argues that the only reason no racial motive was proven is because the village "fought so hard to keep this evidence out of the record."

Caruso also stresses the "overwhelming, hostile unprecedented reaction of the community against Lincoln Green, which often involved racially explicit statements" and which then Village Pres. John Walsh stated, was "a mandate to reject this proposal."

CARUSO'S BRIEF states Siegel has misconstrued the Hills vs. Gautreaux decision. That opinion by the court said while municipal interests are to be considered by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, "they cannot block Congress' goal of providing for expanded low-income housing opportunities distributed throughout a metropolitan housing market."

The third case argued by the two sides in the supplemental briefs is Eastlake vs. Forest City Enterprises Inc., which involved the rights of property owners seeking rezoning.

Siegel says the Supreme Court's decision in that case recognizes that "a mere interference with the owner's plans to develop his property is insufficient to invalidate a zoning ordinance." Walsh was village president when the remarks were made in 1971.

Caruso disagrees, saying in his brief the Eastlake case does not apply to the Lincoln Green case. The Eastlake case involves procedures for establishing zoning classifications, which the Arlington Heights-MHDC case does not, he says.

Business district revitalization urged

Heights," he said. "It's high time we moved ahead with something like this. This is good not only for the one segment of Arlington Heights but for the entire community."

PROPERTY OWNER Craig Baldwin of Riverside, Calif., warned that parking is the key to central business district success. He said a mall in Riverside failed because of stiff parking requirements.

Roy L. Tucker, owner of the Dunton Court shopping center predicted the project will succeed. "I feel it would be a great success that will encourage developers to build more. We've got everything in the area to make it work."

None of the proposed revitalization will cost the taxpayers or merchants anything, Kessler said. The garage will be financed by revenue bonds. Two adjacent parcels of land and reconstruction of sidewalks will be paid for by a U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development grant and the shopping mall-office complex will be built by the developer.

ed for hand puppets, has been planned for grammar-school age children. Pat Craig, program librarian for the children's department, said. Admission is free.

Mate seized in attempt to kill wife

A Palatine man's alleged attempt to murder his wife backfired when a bomb he is accused of making blew up in his hands, police reported Thursday.

Arlington Heights detectives said they arrested William E. Fashing, 36, of 607 S. Stuart Ln., at 5:45 p.m. Wednesday, and charged him with arson and the attempted murder of his 32-year-old wife, Geraldine.

Police said Fashing suffered minor burns on his arms when the bomb he was planting in his wife's car, parked at the Northwest Medical Arts Building, 1100 W. Central Rd., Arlington Heights, exploded prematurely at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

FASHING, WHO was treated and released for burns at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, reportedly told police he had no knowledge of the bomb. Police said Fashing "insisted" on his innocence even after his arrest.

Police described the bomb as homemade, comprised of putty, gunpowder and .22-caliber shells. Its trigger was a spring-loaded device that detonated while Fashing was planting the bomb.

The bomb reportedly was armed to explode at the slightest jarring.

Detectives Pat Kennedy and Gerry Besenhofer of the Arlington Heights police went to Fashing's Palatine home at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday to question him. They said he gave them permission to search his house and garage.

KENNEDY SAID they found components in Fashing's garage resembling those used in the bomb.

Police transported Fashing to the Arlington Heights Police Station, where he was charged Wednesday night. Police said Fashing refused to make any statement other than maintaining he had no knowledge of the bomb in his wife's car before the explosion.

Bond for Fashing initially was set at $100,000. He appeared in the Evanston branch of Cook County Circuit Court Thursday with his attorney, Santo Volpe of Chicago, and was given a reduced bond of $10,000 by Associate Judge Milton H. Solomon.

Solomon approved the reduced bond over the objections of attorneys for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office, police said.

The court date for Fashing is Oct. 29 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court. He was turned over to Cook County Sheriff's Police following the hearing and released after posting bond, police said.

Decoys in world's oldest profession

'Johns' practically beg to be arrested

by DAVID SMOTHERS

It was the first time Mary had done it. She was propositioned on the street by a man she had never seen before and indicated yes — for $15.

A minute later, she stood on the corner of Broadway and Cornelia streets in Chicago, threw back her mane of light brown hair, and said, "You know, I was an English teacher before I took this job."

"You're getting a lesson in basic English," she was told. "I certainly am," she said.

Mary is a police officer. This was her first night at pretending she was a prostitute.

The man who propositioned her was on his way to jail.

His plight is being repeated in Chicago and in cities across the country seeking to get prostitutes off their streets.

The new twist, in most cases, is that the customers are as likely — more likely, often since they are dumb — to be arrested as are the streetwalkers.

The minute Mary opened the door of her prospect's car, four policemen were on the run. They yanked open the door of the driver's seat, hauled him out, and spreadeagled him against his car.

Mary was helped from the car in almost chivalrous fashion by her fellow officers and escorted back to Broadway and Cornelia to get ready for another "john" — streetwalkers' lingo for a client or "trick."

The Johns came so fast the neophyte streetwalker had to slow down so her backup men could keep up with her. It was like picking flies off flypaper at Broadway and Cornelia.

Mary had six within an hour. She took a breather only because the police car in the supermarket parking lot across the street was packed with Johns.

Mary went along with them for their booking at the Town Hall police station — but in a separate car so she would not have to listen to the men revile her or, as sometimes happens, make fresh propositions.

Plucked from the police academy, Mary is a new breed of cop. But the number of her kind has been mounting this year because police departments have decided to go after the Johns.

Traditionally, only the women have been arrest bait. Their tricks got a pass, even though laws against soliciting for prostitution generally apply as much to the Johns as to the females who make their living (and their pimps' living) off of them.

It is called the world's oldest profession. But, in the last two years, too many have been practicing it and police have been almost forced into action.

Recession one reason

The recession could be one reason, vice cops theorize. Or, they think, it could be the new age of open talk about sex, plus movies such as "Superfly" (that is not a precise word for "superpimp" in black street talk but it is not far off) which depict procurers and their girls as affluent, even admirable characters.

Lt. Robert McCann of the Chicago Vice Control Division said: "I know a few years ago there wasn't the number of prostitutes and there wasn't the number of pimps. I can remember when a pimp was a pretty insulating term. Now it seems to be calling a person a success."

The solution for McCann and other police officers: put policewomen, meter maids, clerks, typists, walk-free volunteers, even policemen's wives on the street and rake in the Johns who wanted to pay for them.

It has been easy. The Johns practically beg to be arrested.

Carol Dowling can attest to that. She is a beauty contest queen who worked for the Sacramento, Calif., police department as a decoy while putting herself through law school.

Her corner was the intersection of 4th and T streets. "The whole group of people that drive up there are really weird, incredibly dumb," she said.

Once, she said, a John asked her for a $20 "date." A tape recorder picked up his words and relayed them to a backup car, but they were not enough to insure a conviction. So a policeman barked through the squad car loudspeaker: "What kind of date?"

The John specified just what he wanted and was under arrest.

In Seattle, a 30-year-old divorcee named Ruby walks the street for free. "Sometimes they ask if I'm a cop," she said. "I laugh and say 'yes.' Later they find out I wasn't kidding."

In Chicago, vice officer Richard Ravenscraft, operating as a male decoy to lure legitimate prostitutes into making a proposition, pulled up his car and told his partner, "The street is dry tonight."

'The Silver Fox'

Jerry Leahy, a veteran known among streetwalkers as "the Silver Fox," said "Yeah, I just checked. It's a great night for boys but a tough night for girls" — meaning Johns were being hauled in by the carload but streetwise hookers were hard to come by.

In six hours of working the North Side, they got only three arrests out of three propositions, and only two of them were from females.

The other was from a 17-year-old transvestite who sat in Ravenscraft's car, fat tears rolling down his cheeks, protesting, "I'm not a prostitute; I'm a female impersonator."

In contrast, Mary's trade came so quickly she could barely handle it.

McCann said, "In a sweep last Saturday night, we arrested 56 men and 46 women. It seems like the customers aren't getting the word or think we're kidding or something. I think when the word gets out strong enough, they'll be a little more cautious."

Ravenscraft's assessment of the Johns' stubborn determination was more succinct: "They're savages," he said.

There is a slight hitch in the decoy program.

The literal definition of "decoy" is "something intended to lure into a trap, a person used to lead another into a trap." Police entrapment, if it can be proven, gets the case thrown out of court.

One judge in Detroit, William C. Hague, does it all the time.

He maintains the decoys act like prostitutes and that is entrapment per se. By mid-August, Hague had freed all 29 male defendants brought before him in decoy cases.

'Johns' get convicted

But most other judges go along with the police and the conviction rate is high although the punishment tends to be slight — a $100 fine and six months' court supervision for the men. A woman with a competent pimp can expect to pay a similar amount and be back on the street in a day or so.

The reason the charges stick is that officers such as Mary and the Silver Fox are under orders to never ever make a proposition.

To the watcher on the street, all Mary does is walk and wait.

There is nothing singular about her except that an attractive young woman in a chaste russet pants suit, is pacing back and forth, alone, under a street light on Broadway and Cornelia at midnight.

A car going north stops. Mary stops. An arm beckons; a few words are exchanged. The car goes around the corner and stops on tree-darkened Cornelia. Mary goes to it and leans, palms down, on the sill of the open right front door window.

In five seconds, she straightens, opens the door, and sits down, half in and half out. A policeman who has been hiding behind the next car down, with the gun drawn, races to decoy being propositioned by a man for sex. During the past two years, too many have been practicing the world's oldest profession, and police in Chicago and across the nation are battling to get the prostitutes off the streets.

the driver's door, tells him he is under arrest, and orders him out.

The general reaction of a man busted at Broadway and Cornelia that night was, "What did I do?" The police would ignore him and ask Mary, who was specific:

"$10 for a —, $20 for a — and —, $10 for a —."

(In journalistic honesty, it should be noted that this report is not as complete as it might be because the reporter involved had given his word not to ask Mary exactly what happened.

(The Chicago Police Department became alarmed over a newspaper interview and picture which forced it to take a particularly striking and effective decoy — an ex-nun, as it happened — off the street.

(The reporter was allowed to watch Mary, ride with her, have coffee with her, and listen to what she said, but not to ask her questions. One more thing: Mary is not her real name.)

The Silver Fox's techniques were a bit more mysterious, since he operated alone from a car. All three of those he collared accused him of deceiving them in one way or another.

The Fox would grin in friendly, wolfish fashion (he could best be described as resembling Lee Marvin) and say, "You've got to lie a little bit in this business."

Techniques vary

Techniques vary in other cities.

In Los Angeles, female decoys are told never to get into cars (two Chicago operatives have been injured, recently when their Johns tried to make a run for it).

A decoy in Seattle will take her John all the way to a hotel room, with the result that once a vice squad captain bounded from a closet only to discover that his quarry was a police officer seeking to arrest a civilian police decoy.

Single decoys ran into trouble with bona fide prostitutes and their pimps in Salt Lake City. In the interests of self protection, the imposters were told to operate two to a car and stay in the vehicle. The device worked well enough to nail congressman, Rep. Alan Howe, last summer.

One way or the other, police departments are convinced the program is needed and that it gets results.

In Washington, a long-standing use of female decoys was stepped up when hookers began flooding the district around 14th and R streets preparing to celebrate the bicentennial year in their special fashion.

Chicago women couldn't wait for a bus in some neighborhoods without being propositioned. The Salt Lake City decoys went on the street when police discovered prostitutes were following a circuit, coming in from Las Vegas, Seattle and other points to work the West Second South Street area.

The prostitute circuit

Police in Minnesota's twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul got moving when judges began buying lawyers' arguments that it was discriminating to drag in prostitutes without bringing in the Johns.

For a police department to ask women to get out on the street and hustle runs against the grain in some cities. New York and Boston, to name two, will not do it.

Other cities justify their means by the results: the Chicago vice squads average more than 100 men and women every time they hit the street, with a 90 per cent conviction rate; Seattle's Ruby estimates she has nailed more than 100 Johns in the last year and missed convictions only three times; Los Angeles decoys got 350 men over a few months in Hollywood this year and 90 per cent pleaded guilty; in Washington from last November through Aug. 26 there were 2,168 arrests for soliciting — 1,375 males and 793 females.

Mary fell bad after her first night on the street.

"What a rotten thing to be arrested for," she said on her way back to the Town Hall station.

"Don't feel that way," the sergeant driving her said. "It's one thing if a guy takes a girl out to dinner and they get along and there's a natural thing going."

"But these guys who drive up to you on a corner — they're slobs."

SEVEN YEARS AGO Cynthia Kane, 28, wouldn't have dreamed of posing as a prostitute... because at that time she was Sister Mary Anthony. Today, the former nun is a police decoy and the men offering to pay her for sex are shuffled off to jail.

Libbers claim partial credit for male vice arrests

by ED ROGERS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has reported big increases in the number of men arrested on vice charges across the country but has no way of knowing whether the suspects are vice operators or prostitutes' clients, a spokesman says.

The reason is that police departments that contribute local statistics to the crime report are required to list both types of arrests in a single category called prostitution and commercial vice," the spokesman said.

The FBI's Uniform Crime Report for the calendar year 1975 shows the number of females arrested in this category remained about the same for five years — 34,965 in 1975 compared to 34,968 in 1970.

But arrests of males in the prostitution and commercial vice category rose 51.7 per cent — from 7,995 in 1970 to 12,125 in 1975 the FBI report showed.

The FBI spokesman believes there is no way of knowing how many prostitutes' customers — called "Johns" in street lingo — are among those arrested without checking police records, city by city.

However, the National Organization for Women believes there has been increasing use of decoys to arrest the Johns and that the women's rights movement has had something to do with it.

"My impression from traveling around the country is that it is happening more and more all over the country — the West Coast, East Coast and Midwest," said Melissa Thompson, NOW's legislative coordinator.

"Some of it is in response to feminist demands that the customer be arrested too."

Ms. Thompson said one court juris-dition in California has thrown out cases against the prostitutes because the customers were not given the same arrest treatment.

"Cases (against prostitutes) were thrown out of a local municipal court because the police department had a history of arresting the prostitute but not the customer," she said. "I know that is being raised as a defense in many areas."

But Ms. Thompson said the customers' defense that he has been entrapped by the police decoy is not helping the men in many jurisdictions.

"My impression is that the arrests have been standing up in court."

"I'm waiting for the day they publish the names of the male customers as readily as they publish the names of arrested prostitutes in the newspaper."

"If the customers were treated equally with the prostitutes, prostitution would soon be decriminalized. The male customers are well established white businessmen. It would be interesting."

"My observation is that some of the public opponents of prostitution do themselves make use of prostitution."

For Nov. 2 election

GOP to sue to alter ballot order

The Cook County Republican party Thursday filed suit in federal court asking that the positions be assigned randomly for the Nov. 2 election.

The suit, filed late Thursday afternoon, asks that a recent ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Bernard Decker regarding ballot assignments in DuPage County be applied to Cook County.

Decker's ruling outlawed the traditional Illinois practice in which election officials traditionally assign the favored top spot on the ballot to their own party. In DuPage County, the top spot traditionally goes to the Republicans while it goes to the Democrats in Cook County.

IN HIS RULING, brought by the Democratic candidate for state's attorney in DuPage County, Decker ruled ballot positions either must be assigned by lottery or rotated by precinct to ensure that neither party is unduly favored.

Decker, in his ruling, estimated the top position on the ballot is worth 3 per cent to 5 per cent of the vote.

The Cook County case is filed against the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners and Cook County Clerk Stanley Kasper, who runs elections for suburban Cook County. The case is expected to be heard by U.S. District Court Judge Hubert Will next week, said John Tobias Dixon, attorney for the GOP.

Kasper refused to comment Thursday on what effect the suit may have on preparations for the election in the suburbs.

COOK COUNTY GOP Chairman Harold Tyrrell said he decided to file the suit earlier this week after becoming convinced that Decker's ruling should apply to Cook County.

Tyrrell said Decker's ruling must be applied to the Nov. 2 election unless both parties are to run the risk of having the election declared invalid. "You have a federal judge saying part of the system is unconstitutional before you start, so that's possible," Tyrrell said.

Tyrrell said that because Decker said the top ballot position is worth 3 per cent to 5 per cent of the vote, he could imagine a challenge to the election if one presidential candidate or another wins the state by less than that.

County second on list for swine flu vaccine

Suburban Cook County is second on the state's schedule for distribution of swine flu vaccine, but definite dates for the start of the immunization program have not been announced.

Dr. Joyce Lashof, director of the Illinois Dept. of Public Health, Thursday said vaccine will be delivered first to northeast Illinois counties outside of Cook.

The Springfield region will be the last in the state to get vaccine.

The inoculation program will be completed by Christmas, she said.

THERE WILL BE enough vaccine for 87 per cent of the "high risk" population, defined as persons over 60 and those chronically ill; and for 60 per cent of everyone else over 18. Shots are not recommended for persons under 18.

Vaccine is being sent to Illinois in periodic shipments so not all parts of the state can be immunized simultaneously, Dr. Lashof said.

Sacred Heart Spirit Week is scheduled

An "International Day," freshman initiation and a rope pull between classes will highlight Spirit Week beginning Wednesday at Sacred Heart of Mary High School, 2800 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows.

Spirit Week is a traditional program planned each year by the sophomores class to promote school unity. This year's program was planned by class officers Liz Petzold, Arlington Heights; Sarah Burke, Arlington Heights; Lisa Deger, Palatine; and Maureen Meersman, Mount Prospect; with class sponsor Pat Philbin.

On Wednesday students will wear international dress and compete in a fashion show. Outdoor games and a balloon launch will be held Thursday. Freshman initiation, including a party hosted by the sophomores, is scheduled Friday.

Holiday cards now available

Holiday greeting cards for the Christmas season are available from the Heart Assn. of North Cook County.

Contributions of more than 20 cents per card are requested. Names can be printed at a cost of 30 to 40 cents a card.

Order forms, which include color photos of the cards, may be obtained from the Heart Assn. of North Cook County, at 675-1535.

Death of infants topic of workshop

Area clergy, lay workers, police and fire department officers are invited to attend an educational workshop entitled "Sudden Infant Death — a pastoral concern," from 10:30 a.m. to noon Oct. 28 at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. The premise for the program is that the support of faith is one of the most important dimensions of family grief. Irene Moriarty, pastoral counselor of the sudden infant death syndrome regional research center, Loyola University Medical Center, will direct the workshop.

A film, "After Our Baby Died," will be shown and a discussion will follow. The workshop is sponsored by the Alexian Brothers' Dept. of Religion. Interested persons may register by calling 437-6300, ext. 694. There is no fee.

Old cautions revived about new punch-card voting

by WANDALYN RICE

A news analysis

Local political leaders are in the process of reviving some of the techniques used to educate voters about paper ballots in preparation for the new punch-card voting system to be used in the suburbs in the Nov. 2 election.

The old systems, which fell into disuse when Cook County converted to lever voting machines in the 1950s, include a caution to straight party-line voters not to be confused by the request from precinct captains of the other party to "just give us one vote."

The old paper ballot procedures particularly are important in the races for the Illinois House where voters have the opportunity to "bullet" by casting three votes for one candidate and in the judicial races where intended votes for whole fields of candidates can be voided by the "give-us-one-vote" ploy.

IN THE HOUSE races, the difference between the punch-card system, called the Votamatic, and the lever-type machines will be immediately apparent to voters. While the lever machines in the past listed all candidates for the Illinois House three times, the Votamatic will list them only once.

The three listings for the House candidates on the lever machines were needed to allow the options of bullet voting. At different places on the machine, the voter could pull a lever to give three votes to one legislative candidate, 1½ votes to each of two candidates or one vote to each of three candidates.

On the Votamatic, the names of House candidates will be listed only once. If a voter places his punch in the punch-card ballot for one candidate, the vote will count three times. If he votes for two, each vote is worth 1½ and a vote for three will count once.

The counting will be done automatically by computer.

In this way, a voter who punches the straight ticket designation on the ballot and then goes to the House race to vote for one candidate of the opposite party, intending to spread his three votes among three candidates, must punch his votes for the candidates of his own party as well as the cross-over. A punch for the cross-over only will override the straight ticket designation and cast three votes for the cross-over.

CARL HANSEN, Republican committeeman of Elk Grove Township, says that fact "will have to be part of what we tell people when we educate them to the new system."

Hansen expects the problem with House candidates to be fairly easily solved. "It would seem that anybody voting straight Republican would not be too likely to cross over on a legislative race," Hansen says. "We're mainly going to have to watch out for errors of inadvertence."

The bigger concern for party leaders, Hansen says, comes in the judicial races, where voter awareness of candidates is low and the "give us one vote" arguments of the other party can be strong.

In the case of the large judicial fields, where for example 15 Republicans and 15 Democrats are contending for 15 new judgeships, a voter who has voted straight Republican and then crosses over to give one vote to a Democrat in the field runs the risk of simultaneously voiding 14 other GOP votes, Hansen said.

THE LOSS WOULD occur unless the voter punched the ballot for 14 Republican judicial candidates as well as the one Democratic candidate, Hansen said. Otherwise, election counters would not recognize the one cross-over vote will void all the GOP votes intended by the voter when he punched for a straight ticket.

Hansen and other loyalists in both parties prefer, of course, not to have to deal with the problem. "There's a simple solution to the entire thing," Hansen says. "Suburbanites can just vote straight Republican and not do anything else."

Although party loyalists don't say so, there is another way to avoid inadvertently voting or failing to vote for a candidate under the Votamatic system. As one independent Democrat recently remarked, "The best thing to do is leave the straight ticket position alone and go through the whole ballot. That way there won't be any mistake."

Over 110,000 voters register in Cook County

Between 110,000 and 120,000 new voters registered for the Nov. 2 election in suburban Cook County Tuesday despite foul-ups in some precincts that may have prevented some registrations, county election officials said Wednesday.

Tuesday was the last day to register for the Nov. 2 election. However, a spokesman for Cook County Clerk Stanley Kasper said persons who were at polling places Tuesday and were unable to register will be allowed to register late in the clerk's office in the county building, Chicago.

"People who made a sincere effort to register and will attest to that under oath can register," the spokesman said.

County election officials said they have no idea how many persons may have been turned away in precincts that ran out of voter registration materials before the registration was to close officially at 9 p.m.

Election officials delivered 429,000 registration cards to the county's 2,280 precincts, but some precincts ran out of cards anyway, Kasper's spokesman said.

No break-down on which townships registered the most new voters will be available for about two weeks because of the time needed to process the new registration, officials said.

CENTURY SUPPLY COMPANY

Imagine the utter amazement we at Century Supply Company felt when we opened a recent edition of the Herald Real Estate Section to find the following erroneous headline: "Century Supply a fake in home repairs: official."

After 25 years of hard work building a business and good will, serving many thousands of customers, we were greatly shocked to find out that we had been officially declared a fake. A close reading of the story revealed that the reporter was really talking about a bogus home repair sales outfit who had been going door-to-door on the West Side of Chicago illegally using our name. Nevertheless the damage done by that headline can never be fully known.

Freedom of the Press is an important right in our society, but responsibility must be used with it. Erroneous news reporting can damage individuals, businesses and their reputations—sometimes forever. Misleading headlines—just like misleading advertising—has no place in a good newspaper.

Here are the facts to set the entire story straight.

September 2, 1976 Herald

Century Supply a fake in home repairs: official

Coke Melroy, Illinois consumer advocate, wrote consumers to beware of Century Supply Co. after receiving complaints that its door-to-door salesmen were using the name of a reliable local company to sell inferior products.

Complaints to the consumer advocate office indicate that at least one company is attempting to sell inferior products by using the name of a reliable local company to sell inferior products.

The fake company, which was the name of the Century Supply Company, visited the home of a woman in Chicago's west side recently. The woman claimed they were working on a ceiling and asked her to leave the room. They asked her to leave the room. They asked her to leave the room.

When the woman returned, she found the room in a state of disrepair. She called the police and the police came. The police came. The police came.

By using common sense, this consumer could have avoided the trouble. The consumer could have avoided the trouble. The consumer could have avoided the trouble.

When you are approached by a door-to-door salesperson, be sure to get his name, address, and phone number. Also get the name, address, and phone number of the company. Check with the phone book to verify the company's listing. Call your local Better Business Bureau and Chamber of Commerce and ask if there are any complaints listed against them. Do not be pressured into signing a contract and give yourself at least one full day to think it over first.

For consumers with a distributor sales problem, or if you have further questions about home repair, contact the Consumer Advocate Office, 300 N. LaSalle, Chicago 9000.

Century Supply Co. really a reliable firm

A headline in Thursday's Herald Real Estate section incorrectly stated that Century Supply Co. was a fake in home repairs.

At the story stated, Century Supply Co. is a reliable business. The story was intended to warn residents of door-to-door solicitations being conducted by a bogus company using the Century name.

We regret any problems caused by the Century Supply Co. name which has been used in the area for several years.

Commerce Dept. told to make boycott reports public

by RICHARD LERNER

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Ford ordered the Commerce Dept. Thursday to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab Economic boycott of Israel.

Ford's disclosure order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest it would during Wednesday's debate with Jimmy Carter.

As the President acted to carry out his debate pledge on the boycott issue, angry senators and congressmen accused him of lying about his role in congressional efforts to make boycott compliance illegal. They said Ford's lobbyists killed that legislation.

IN A MEMORANDUM issued in Los Angeles, where he was campaigning,

Ford told Commerce Sec. Elliot Richardson to arrange for "public inspection and copying of boycott-related reports to be filed in the future with the Dept. of Commerce."

He said only Richardson should withhold only "proprietary business information" whose release could damage the firms commercially.

"During the past year," Ford said,

"there has been a growing interest in and awareness of the impact of the Arab boycott on American business.

"Disclosures of boycott-related reports will enable the American public to assess for itself the nature and impact of the Arab boycott and to monitor the conduct of American companies."

HE SAID HE HAD determined that the disclosure requirement would not damage "our vital interests in the Middle East" and would reaffirm "our national policy of opposition to boycott action against nations friendly to us."

A White House "fact sheet" said the disclosure policy would take effect immediately, but Ford's memo made clear it would apply only to boycott-reports filed henceforth under laws that require U.S. firms to report when they become enmeshed in the Arab

Arab states refuse to do business with firms that deal with Israel or are owned by Jewish interests. They require prospective client firms to report on these matters. Many U.S. companies traditionally have complied.

During the debate Wednesday, Carter said it was "an absolute disgrace" that the Ford administration allowed

U.S. firms to comply with such discriminatory demands. He accused

Ford of having opposed antiboycott legislation for fear of damaging U.S.-

Arab relations.

In Washington Thursday, Commerce

Dept. representatives from Richardson on down indicated they had been surprised by Ford's announcement.

Even before Ford issued his formal order, they made clear it would not apply to firms that honored the boycott in the past.

nation," Czarnecki said. "Everybody in Western and Eastern Europe, not only the Polish people, is of the same opinion."

The London Evening News carried a story of the debate under a headline: "Dumb Ford drops a Clanger on Russia."

"President Ford astounded millions of TV viewers last night," the newspaper's article said in reference to the remark. The story quoted Rep. Edward Koch, D-N.Y., as saying, "I have never heard anything so dumb."

THE WEST GERMANY news agency DPA took a poll after the debate and reported Carter was easily the winner of the debate as a result of Ford's statement.

There was no immediate comment or reaction from the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia or the other Eastern European nations.

In Tel Aviv, the newspaper Maariv said the statements on the Middle East gave "the impression that the two candidates see the conquest of the Jewish voter as a central goal in their election campaigns."

"Carter's emphasis on the Arab boycott utilized the dissatisfaction among American Jews about the administration's efforts to torpedo legislation against the boycott, and Ford had no choice other than to change his position and announce that he would order publication of the names of American firms going along with the boycott," Maariv said.

Carter's statement that he would embargo all American goods from Arab countries, should the Arabs impose another oil embargo of their own

League.

Poll indicates Ford will win in a landslide

1.2 per cent among those who said they would vote for him now, while Carter posted a 6.9 per cent gain in that category.

A breakdown of the male-female ratio over who watched the first and second debate indicated a 50-50 split for the first debate, but The Herald determined that 55.3 per cent of those responding to the poll were women while 44.7 per cent said they were men.

The gains posted by Carter — both in the category of persons who believed he won the debate and those who said they did not view the encounter but support Carter anyway — suggest that events, like the resignation of U.S. Agriculture Sec. Earl Butz and a report indicating the costly American strike during the Mayaguez incident was unnecessary, could have been a deciding factor.

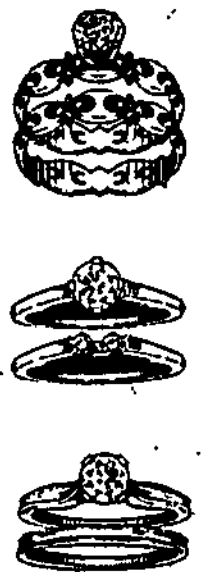

THE OVER-ALL strength of Ford in the normally Republican area is no surprise, but there had been some question as to whether the President would do as well as his predecessors in this area.

Carter, with 36.4 per cent, appears to be headed toward a better performance than either U.S. Sen. George McGovern at 33.5 per cent of the vote in 1972 or U.S. Sen. Hubert Humphrey at 35.5 per cent in 1968.

A less detailed sampling of reaction by Des Plaines radio station WYEN indicated area residents responding to that poll also favored Ford. Of the 208 persons involved in the station's survey, 118 said Ford won the debate while 90 gave the second round to Carter. Three persons called the debate a tie.

A similar survey after the first debate gave Ford a 2-to-1 edge over Carter.

That's him! He's a life saver! NOBODY's more important than that!

The way we see it

Quick thinking limits tragedy

It is a welcome twist in a time of tragedy.

Three Hoffman Estates men were saved from death last weekend when on Arlington Heights policeman and several persons from a crowd of onlookers worked together to rescue them. A third man later died from injuries suffered in the accident.

Much of the credit must go to Arlington Heights patrolman Charles Pedersen, who arrived at the accident scene and immediately ripped away the door from the badly damaged car in which the three men were trapped. He still couldn't free them. That's when several persons from a crowd of 300 realized the predicament and came to the rescue. Together they picked up the car and moved it away from the wreckage, freeing the injured from a fiery explosion seconds later.

These onlookers and Pedersen risked death, and they deserve commendation for their effort.

If we knew their names we could recognize each of them individually, but as with so many incidents, they didn't stay around to have their names recorded.

We wish they would have, so that we could talk to them to determine why they put their lives on the line. In a split second decision they became heroes.

The stories we read don't always end this way. We read of gawkers who refuse to help or those who hinder emergency procedures. We read of brutal beatings and murders in the light of day with no one willing to report what they saw.

We're sorry to report that even in the best times the world isn't perfect. Despite the heroics of those at the accident scene, there is another side to the story... the report of a man being arrested by police for stealing equipment from one of the disabled autos.

Debates informative, not decisive factor

The second of the three debates between Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford shed needed light on how these men would differ in their approach toward foreign policy.

Primarily because of the aggressive positions taken by Carter, the debate was more stimulating than the one on domestic issues held two weeks earlier.

Performances of the two debaters in their first encounter were generally unexciting; President Ford appeared to have the edge in that debate, primarily because of the experience and certainty reflected in his answers. In the second debate, Carter's scrappy directness improved his showing substantially.

The impact of the debates on voter sentiment is questionable, however. A poll conducted by Herald staff, based on scientific research methods, indicates that the debates have not played a key role in shaping voter sentiment. While Northwest suburban viewers of the debate were giving Carter higher marks for his skill in the second debate, a more crucial question in the poll was, "If the election were held tonight, who would you vote for?"

The number of undecided voters dropped sharply, from 32.1 per cent when the first Herald poll was taken two weeks ago to 22.4 per cent. President Ford picked up the major share of support from those leaving the undecided column. His backing increased from 44.4 per cent to 52.6 per cent. Carter gained modestly, from 23.5 per cent to 25 per cent.

If the "undecided" respondents were divided evenly, with half given to Ford and half to Carter, Ford would receive a landslide victory in the Northwest suburbs at this point. His 65 per cent total would be comparable to President Nixon's margin over George McGovern.

The debates, thus, appear to be shaping up as an informative, but not a key part of the process of voter decision-making — a sharp contrast to the 1960 debates which played a significant role in John Kennedy's victory over Richard Nixon.

Immediate settlement needed in Dist. 23 talks

Teachers and board members in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 have been spinning their wheels in contract negotiations for weeks over non-money matters. It is a situation that needs to be resolved swiftly.

Contract talks broke off more than three weeks ago in the five-school district when teacher negotiators left the bargaining table, saying the board was unwilling to compromise on several issues.

Although board negotiators have consistently maintained that they were willing to continue negotiations and are only waiting for teachers to call for another session (as spelled out in their negotiating agreement) teachers have chosen other courses of action.

Since leaving the table, teachers have picketed the administration center, attempted to have Dist. 23 Supt. Edward Grodsky intervene with the board, and passed out leaflets to parents at school functions to bring pressure on the board.

Dist. 23 is one of only a few districts in the area that has failed to reach a contract settlement, and this is not the first year bargaining problems have erupted there.

In the past, however, the side that felt negotiations had broken down used a provision in the negotiating agreement and declared talks at an impasse. And, in the past, impasse has resulted in a settlement agreeable to both sides.

It appears as though the teachers have used the past few weeks to make a point, show their strength and gain support from the community.

We would rather see Dist. 23's teachers direct their energy to achieving a settlement.

LEAP asks volunteers to keep election honest

Vote fraud at times has been linked to Chicago as commonly as the winds off the lake. It may raise its ugly head again next month.

One organization, Project LEAP (Legal Elections in All Precincts) is on the move to recruit independent judges of elections to work in the city and suburbs to help see the election is carried off without any fraud.

As in the past, the group needs volunteer judges to staff some polling places. The judges' names are needed by Oct. 13.

At present count, there are more than 2,500 unfilled election judge position in the county, of 15,000 judges who will be needed on election day.

Fraud-free elections in Cook County are not an impossible dream. Vote fraud has diminished in recent years, and organizations like Project LEAP are responsible. The organization deserves support. Volunteers may call 726-3954 before Oct. 13.

Unit 'pressure' applied by Dist. 214 not liked by Arlington Hts. residents High School Dist. 214 is propagandizing the children and their parents first in a general mailing and now in a letter from the principal. The scandalous fact is that half-truths, innuendoes, and falsehoods are involved. Perhaps it is the school board who ordered the administration, who in turn, has ordered each principal to carry on this practice, but the result is that these previously respected individuals are rapidly losing their credibility.

We wonder whether they should be involved in teaching our children or should be held up as examples of behavior for our children to imitate. Does the Dist. 214 board realize what irreparable damage it is doing?

The propaganda that Dist. 214 is disseminating to the parents and to the children is unreal. It can be compared to the last desperate action of a losing political candidate!

Shouldn't we expect the high school district to help the parents and the students to learn the simple unedited facts, and to encourage them to make a conscious and intelligent decision in the matter of a unit school district? But instead, the Dist. 214 administration is telling the children and the parents in the south Arlington Heights area that they "would be expected to transfer..." out of Rolling Meadows High School if the unit district were approved by the voters.

It seems that the Dist. 214 board is so embittered by the unit district that it would not consider a mutual tuition-transfer policy so the children could finish high school where they have started. I was under the mistaken impression that the board's first responsibility was the educational well-being of all the children no matter what the circumstances were. The unit district board would certainly allow Dist. 214 children to continue at Forest View until they graduated — a policy usually followed in the past by most school boards whenever school boundaries have been changed.

The citizens south of Central Road know the educational and financial advantages of a unit district, and in the bicentennial spirit of the time, like our forefathers, will vote an end to taxation without adequate representation or remuneration.

Worthy of note

I left your wonderful country Sept. 16 after spending five months with my relatives, the Reillys of 1766 Euclid Ave., Prospect Heights.

Through your paper, could I please convey my thanks to them and the lovely people I met through them, like neighbors and many more of their friends who all made my holiday so pleasant.

On the 4th of July, I was privileged to see your bicentennial celebrations and I was very impressed. The love and affection the Americans have for their country is really something.

I'm now back home again, among the bombs and bullets and after being gone over five months the situation hasn't eased any, although the women are making a great effort to bring peace. If the people of Ireland could learn to live and worship together like they do in the United States, it would go a long way to solving our problem.

I brought a copy of The Herald home with me and it is circulating through the rest of the family. Here's wishing you continued success.

Mrs. Christine McAllister

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank our Des Plaines Park District for the excellent job they have done at Seminole Park.

Myself and my family have resided in Des Plaines for nine years. We all participate in park district activities and appreciate the work done to improve the baseball facilities at Seminole and the Devon-Higgins Baseball Program and more recently the addition of lighted tennis courts.

We recognize that it is impossible to do everything at the same time, or in the same year, to improve facilities; perhaps a drinking fountain or two can be added at Seminole for next year.

I commend the park board, Director Markworth and Superintendent Towler for a job well done. Taxes don't hurt quite as much when we in the community have the opportunity to "see and use" a well-kept park.

The families on Pine Street and those involved on Elm Street would like to thank everybody who donated items to our garage, antique and bake sale, and also those who came out and purchased merchandise.

We also want to thank The Herald and Town Bulletin for all the great coverage they have given Pine Street.

It took the efforts of many people to make this a financial success, which brought us $1,600 to be used toward our legal fees.

It is encouraging to know that others realize that the results of our litigation eventually will affect the whole community, and we appreciate their support.

Carter blames Ford's policies

Wholesale prices increase 0.9%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices rose by nearly a full percentage point in September to the highest level in almost a year, the government reported Thursday. Jimmy Carter blamed President Ford for the increase which could signal renewed inflation.

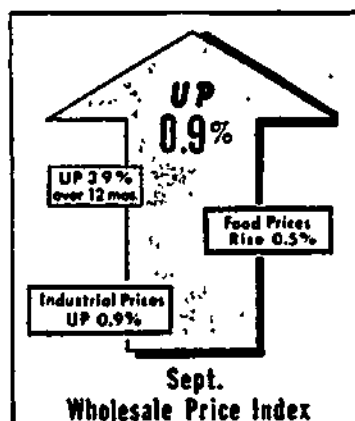

The 0.9 per cent surge in wholesale prices carried the strong threat of further inflation at the consumer level between now and the Nov. 2 presidential election.

September's rise in wholesale prices reflected an annual rate of 10.8 per cent, which eventually will be passed along to consumers in the prices of retail goods. Not since October 1975, have these prices risen so sharply.

DEMOCRATIC challenger Carter quickly branded the wholesale price rise as "still another tragic example of the complete failure of Mr. Ford's economic policies."

Ford's campaign is relying heavily on the claim that his conservative policies are controlling inflation. Carter constantly notes that both unemployment and inflation remain high by historical standards.

The U.S. Labor Dept., which published the wholesale price figures, also will provide voters Friday with their last glimpse of the unemployment situation before they go to the polls.

WHOLESALE prices jumped .9 per cent in September, the U.S. Labor Dept. reported Thursday. The index rose 3.9 per cent in the past year.

Substantial increases of both farm and industrial prices brought about a drastic reversal of the recent cooling trend that had allowed wholesale costs to decline 0.1 per cent in August. THE USUALLY volatile farm prices soared by 1.9 per cent in September, despite declining prices for poultry and cattle. Food prices rose 0.5 per cent.

Industrial prices, which are more indicative of the underlying trend, rose 0.9 per cent. Wood, rubber and fuel prices led the increase.

Industrial prices rose at a 9.6 per cent annual rate over the past three months. September's increase compared to monthly rises of 0.2 per cent in the first five months of the year.

The Wholesale Price Index stood at 184.7 in September, an increase of 3.9 per cent over a year ago. This meant that wholesale goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $184.70.

Stocks rally, Dow gains 5.40

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices rebounded Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange in a late-session rally sparked by bargain hunting and higher retail sales. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 7.70 points Wednesday to close below the 980 support zone for the first time since June 9, gained 5.40 to 965.09. Earlier in the session the closely followed blue chip indicator had fallen almost five points.

Declines led advances, 690 to 535, among the 1,886 issues crossing the tape.

The NYSE common stock index rose 0.20 to 55.33 and the price of an average share increased 17 cents. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter issues, was up 0.57 at 103.54.

Volume totaled 19,830,000 shares, compared with 20,870,000 shares turned over Wednesday.

Ford pact submitted for employees' OK

The 175-member United Auto Workers Ford Council met Thursday to approve a historic contract agreement with the Ford Motor Co. and submit it to the 170,000 workers who have been on strike for more than three weeks. UAW officials said ratification would begin immediately and should be completed by late Tuesday, allowing the No. 2 automaker possibly to begin resuming production at the end of the fourth week of the dispute. Two final hurdles remain to be settled, however, before Ford can resume the car-building operations halted at midnight Sept. 14. The 25,000 skilled workers can vote down the entire pact, and local agreements to supplement the national pact also must be worked out to prevent single plant strikes that could cripple Ford production. By Thursday, only 42 of 99 local agreements had been worked out.

Social Security tax bite to go up

For 19 million middle income workers, the Social Security tax bite in 1977 will be up to $70.20 higher than the $69.03 they contributed this year. The Social Security Administration said Thursday. The amount of wages on which social security taxes are levied goes up from $15,300 this year to $16,800 next year, the agency said in officially announcing an increase built into law and informally announced earlier this year. Under the same automatic increase, the maximum amount a retired person can earn and still get Social Security checks will increase to $3,000 from the current $2,760. Earnings above that amount are subject to a reduction in benefits.

When you buy, count your change

We can too easily take for granted some of the simplest matters, particularly where money is concerned.

I observed this small but worthy lesson the other day. A customer at a store had made a $7 purchase, and he gave the clerk a $20 bill in payment. The clerk inadvertently gave the customer change from a $10 bill, and the fur began to fly very quickly.

In the few seconds that transpired before I could intervene, tempers had reached a flashpoint. When I pointed out that indeed the customer had given a 20, I got a look accusing me of being in cahoots.

CLERKS AND cashiers commonly are instructed not to put big bills into the drawer until they have made the right change, in order to avoid such dilemmas. If they fail to, they will often put the bill into the wrong compartment, thus again saving the day.

But in this case the clerk had done neither. He had put the bill right away into the correct compartment.

Eventually the customer received his proper change, and I'm sure that when the clerk tallied out for the day he found that he balanced correctly.

Speaking dollar-wise

by Robert S. Rosefsky

Of course, it could have happened the other way around, with the customer not noticing that he had been short-changed and walking away $10 light.

A simple tip to avoid such problems: Whenever you give payment with a bill at least two denominations higher than the amount owed, quickly memorize the first three or four numbers on the serial number of the bill. In this way you have ample proof of what denomination bill you paid with. "If you just look in your cash drawer you'll see that the topmost 20 has a serial number that begins with 5942." Hard to argue with that.

WHEN RECEIVING change at a store, bank or other place, always count it immediately in the presence of the cashier to confirm the proper amount. Once you've walked away you're going to have a tough time claiming you were shorted.

At best you might have to wait until the cashier completes a tally of his cash drawer. And even that might not prove your point, particularly if he's had other errors during his shift.

A similar caution with regard to signing credit cards: Always be certain the total amount of the purchase is filled in on the charge slip. An unscrupulous merchant, while I'm sure he is rare, easily could take advantage of a customer by raising the total amount and taking his chances that the customer won't catch the error when he gets his credit card statement.

Not wealthy—just wise!

The smart folks insist on Chicago Faucets

Of course, the very presence of fine Chicago Faucets in a house is a mark of distinction.

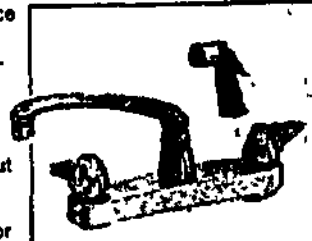

But it doesn't necessarily mean the owner is wealthy... more likely he is just plain wise!

Most homes contain low grade faucets because it's commonplace to cut costs, but not with Chicago Faucets. True, the initial or replacement cost of Chicago Faucets is a little more—but for 75 years Chicago Faucets have been proving that no faucet can offer you such assurance of long life expectancy, ease of maintenance or honest economy.

Think of this the next time you need faucets. You need not be wealthy, just wise!

Actress Katharine Houghton speaks her mind on the arts

by GENIE CAMPBELL

On stage at Arlington Park Theatre, Katharine Houghton plays a naive, almost fragile young woman, unsure of herself as the new mistress of the house in "The Mousetrap."

Her stage appearance could easily pass for real life. She is slight, almost child-like. She might be shy, but never on a one-to-one basis.

However, unrehearsed yet eloquently spoken, articulate views — on what she knows best, the arts — and a softspoken sophistication suggest anything but a lack of self-confidence.

A Sarah Lawrence College graduate with a major in philosophy, Ms. Houghton has concentrated on the theater, though the public most often identifies her as playing the daughter in the movie "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?"

SHE PREFERS live stage because "it's where the best quality of work for me has been available." It's the only medium in the arts which she feels treats women seriously.

"Films and television are appalling. Only a small percentage of the roles are for women. And, except for theater, meager positions for women are reflected elsewhere in the arts," said Ms. Houghton.

"It's hard for a woman painter or sculptor to have her own show or for a woman to direct . . . or even be taken seriously as a writer."

"Playwrights on the other hand have a tendency to write for women," she continued, naming George Bernard Shaw and Anton Chekhov as two good examples. "Tennessee Williams is lauded by all females in the theater. He's found the whole idea of women very dramatic."

"Theater in general is on the verge of rediscovery by the public," she said.

"WE'RE SITTING under a volcano ready to erupt any minute. There's a renaissance of activity brewing, exuberance of art, an enormous amount of potential just ready to be tapped. But I think it will come in one big explosion."

"The theater is an extremely dynamic arena," she continued. "It's been distracted by television and films which might have appeared to give theater a slap in the face. But now I think the public is rediscovering theater is unique."

"And when it hits society, a whole rash of new playwrights will be discovered. And the status of television and films can't help but go up too," said Ms. Houghton.

"People are beginning to take responsibility for themselves and their own happiness. This is reflected in the arts. Society is always reflected in the arts."

If a renaissance is on the cultural horizon, the young actress would have a feel for it. She has been exceedingly active in repertory and stock companies where much of the new good material is tested.

ABOUT HER OWN acting, she continued, "I was serious about not doing it for awhile, but I think it is the arena most suited to me. It combines all my interests and I don't regret it. I have a strong suspicion it is more suited to me than academics. At least it is much, much easier for a woman to work in the theater than academics."

"I would like to direct at some point when I'm older and wiser. I watch very closely," she said. "Young people don't have enough experience to direct. Take lighting for instance. I don't know anything about it and it is a prerequisite to directing. All I know is when the lights are on or off. I've been acting for 10 years and I'm just beginning to feel like an actress."

And in the same respect Ms. Houghton is very careful not to call herself an author, though she recently published a small fairy tale book about growing up, entitled "Two Beastly Tales."

They were written for her brother because "I thought he'd be amused if I wrote them." A writer himself, he sent them on to his own publisher.

"I hope to do that again for myself or for anyone else who might like them," she added.

AS SOON AS "The Mousetrap" closes, David McCallum will return to New York City to help his family move. His plumber and carpenter skills will no doubt come in handy, he said. "I've saved a lot of money learning how to wallpaper."

David McCallum: just another people-watcher

by GENIE CAMPBELL

It doesn't matter to David McCallum if he actually plays golf well — not if the course is readily available and the weather remains a testimony to summer.

He had been playing the morning of this interview. And since it was only his fifth time out altogether, his score, he self-analyzed, "wasn't too bad," not for a novice using second-hand clubs picked up on sale.

Excusing himself for five minutes to shave in preparation for photos, McCallum returned, true to his word, in the same worn sandals he wore at the cast reception opening night for "The Mousetrap" at Arlington Park Theatre.

McCALLUM suggested we talk in his dressing room. It was much too warm. The theater itself was in use. Back outside behind the building he found his spot, taking a seat on two stacked logs next to the garbage and in view of the driving range where every so often a very young golfer would amaze the actor with the strength of his drive.

There is no pretension about McCallum. "It's a great life," he refers to his current engagement through Oct. 17 at Arlington Park Theatre. He plays the questionable detective in Agatha Christie's "Mousetrap."

He likes having his days free. That noon McCallum had been to Woodfield—a local attraction that intrigues many visiting celebrities. They seldom go to shop but rather to people-watch, which can be habit-forming — even to those people who sometimes get tired of people watching them.

"I think Sears is a great institution of America," said McCallum, poker-faced.

With two acting series behind him, "Man From U.N.C.L.E.," which established the English actor, and "Invisible Man," which disappeared in just one season because "the ratings weren't all bad but it was an expensive show to do," McCallum is producing and directing his own "semi-documentary" series, hoping to make a profit out of his own people-watching.

IT'S AN IDEA I have had for a long time," he said. McCallum plans to document American life by focusing on individual, private lives of people he meets right on the street.

"The only criteria are that they be American citizens and not be in show business or the sports world — the two are synonymous anyway."

McCallum said he hasn't had any trouble approaching people. "Not so far, but then I've only done one," he said. "She was a great Slavic monarch type."

McCallum chanced to meet her, introduced himself and then,

ACTRESS KATHARINE HOUGHTON feels a renaissance is just around the corner. "One reason people like crafts cars and such — aren't as important anymore. Instead people are interested in improving body and soul."

by DAVID L. LANGFORD

Behind the triple-locked door of a dim West Side apartment you meet the girl who led you on a wild sexual romp from Manhattan's Algonquin Hotel to Paris' George V.

She pops open a beer and invites you to join her on a huge plush velvet sofa which dominates the odd-shaped room.

Now what do you say to a lust-crazed woman who crawls out of one bed to look for another and describes her encounters with the focus and detail of a Hustler centerfold?

"You're not confusing me with Kate Alexander, are you?" she giggles.

BUT, OF COURSE. This is Gael Greene, the author, not Kate Alexander, the creation of her fantasy.

"Men have been reacting differently," said the girl in the sofa. "Even men I've known for a long time are looking at me funny and making outrageous offers."

"Others are just appalled."

But the reaction of her men friends is not the only thing that has changed in the life of Gael Greene, the 38-year-old former newspaper gal whose new novel

"Blue Sides, No Candy" (William Morrow & Co., $7.95), has brought a new dimension to erotica.

Ms. Greene is going to bank a lot of green. Even before next Tuesday's publication date, paperback rights were sold to Warner Paperback Library for $330,000 and movie offers are already coming in, she said.

ONE CHAPTER already has been published in Playboy magazine.

Despite Gael's protests that she "didn't intend to write an erotic book," Kate Alexander makes Isadora Wing seem frigid.

"It is a story about a woman with a great life and a wonderful husband who wasn't satisfied," said Gael, who divorced Newday managing editor Don Forst after 13 years of marriage. (They remain friends. He edited the book.)

"One way a woman may recapture her femaleness is in bed, and that's what Kate does."

How much of the fiction is really autobiographical, the reader will wonder.

Gael Greene, the daughter of a Detroit clothing store owner, graduated from the University of Michigan, worked briefly for UPI and several years as a general assignment reporter for the New York Post. She has written four other not-so-successful books, including one called "Sex and the College Girl." She also writes a food column for New York magazine.

Kate Alexander, about her creator's age at 40, is a successful screen writer with a taste for gourmet foods as well as sex. She is at home on a Hollywood screen set or eating croissants in bed in a Cannes villa. She frets about her wrinkles and gets a surgeon to reshape her body.

Gael Greene, tall and bosomy with a red tinge in her hair, said she wanted to "show female sensuality in a way it has not been shown before."

"I knew it had to be explicit."

While the author insists her heroine "is quite unlike me in many ways," she admits she is a sensual woman. While writing the book on weekends in Wainwright, N.Y., she remembers "being in a constant state of sexual excitement."

Dialogue of playwright's 'first' needs sharpening

by JULIE MARTOCCIO
(A review)

Double roles are not new to Joseph Krouchick. He's an auditor as well as an aspiring playwright and, like all would-be authors, spends a good deal of time dreaming how his imaginary characters would look and behave if fleshed out on stage.

That dream came true three weeks ago when Krouchick's first play with the double-role title "Swinger Heckell and Mr. Hide" opened at Country Club Theatre's Monday-Night Showcase, Mount Prospect, the area's boon to new, hopeful playwrights.

The play revolves around a shy, worrisome young man, Andy Heckell (Steve Finklestein), who lives in a Chicago high-rise apartment with his fantasies and his trusty binoculars. Andy is constantly goaded by his neighbor, Al (Bob Anderson), the building's self-acclaimed stud, to come out of his shell and "swing" into action.

ANDY, WHOSE ROLE and demeanor are reminiscent of a frustrated Woody Allen, agonizes over his shyness with girls as he attempts to overcome it. The sleek jumpsuit and a cigarette in a holder that dangles between his fingers from a limp wrist are, he soon discovers, a hopeless and ineffectual affectation and his despair deepens.

So far, Andy's only communication with the opposite sex has been with his mother (Laura Flynn), who flits in and out of his apartment unannounced, and an unknown girl who lives in a nearby apartment building. Andy gets his kicks from watching her through his binoculars and, as she sheds her clothes each night, he finds he has fallen in love with her.

His ardor, however, hits ice and his lustful temperature rises with the appearance of Pam, a gorgeous blond airline stewardess (Patti Ross), a friend of a friend who stops in during flights to spend the night at Andy's.

THE EVENING passes with nip and tuck playfulness and an attempt at seduction by Pam, who realizes that even liquor cannot make Andy fulfill his previous intentions.

Even Andy's leading lady (Sue Burke) and female karate teacher (Gail Gabel) are unable to convince Andy he is both appealing and desirable, though a visit from that unknown beauty (Diane Gabel) across the way finally breaks the ice.

Despite the enthusiasm generated by cast members, the play gets off to a slow start. What with all the dialogue the audience never knows what Andy does for a living, if anything, or how the boys feel about anything or anybody other than girls.

FITTING ONE character against another in lengthy dialogue can serve a useful purpose in pointing out contrast between characters but, without action or comedy relief, sharp writing is required, a skill Krouchick has not yet acquired.

The entire play needs cutting and tightening — possibly down to two acts. Yet, in spite of flaws, the audience greeted the second act, a pick-up-upper, with zeal, as big-boomed Sophie entered. She offers the play both energy and style.

At this point one can only wonder why the playwright kept Sophie under wraps until the second act when, had she appeared earlier, her antics might have pepped up the tedious dialogue.

And while we're wondering, how come Jan, whose shyness was supposed to match Andy's, took it upon herself to go to his apartment uninvited even though she'd never met him?

IT WAS OBVIOUS Monday night that Showcase Theatre benefits the playwright who has never had an opportunity to see his work on stage.

Actors can profit, too. As far as this reviewer is concerned, the cast did a remarkable job considering that its members — or most of them — had never before performed in a play. Not a line was fluffed, misdirected or forgotten.

'Burnt Offerings'

Feeble attempt to possess

by GENIE CAMPBELL

It became so difficult to invent new angles for disaster movies that they finally all but dried up. Sensurround only gave people headaches and few people shed a tear when Charleston Heston drowned in a sewer.

New "possession" is being marketed in huge quantities — by the devil, by a memory or even a house. But anyone who was weaned on "Psycho" would think the Kennedy Expressway at 5 p.m. was more frightening than the latest possessed release, "Burnt Offerings."

In this one, an old mansion obsesses and finally destroys, through a series of illogical, unexplainable occurrences a happy, loving family (happy and loving upon arrival) who rent the old house for the summer.

WHAT LITTLE mystery and suspense is generated by this picture is killed instantly by long, drawn-out, melodramatic scenes that prove nothing. Rather they belong to the afternoon soap operas that are concerned with stretching out time. Producer/director Dan Curtis' credits include "Dark Shadows."

The cast of "Burnt Offerings" is very impressive, but wasted for the most part. Karen Black and Oliver Reed play a couple who are looking for a house to rent over the summer.

The multilevel, multiroom gothic mansion is a virtual steal — the first tip-off that all is not as it seems.

Nor do the loony caretakers, Eileen Heckart and her aging brother played by Burgess Meredith, add much reassurance.

There is one requirement to renting this house. Food must be left three times a day in the attic sitting room for the caretakers' invalid, 85-year-old mother who never shows herself.

NEVERTHELESS, the family moves in, including a young son, Lee Montgomery, and Reed's elegant, saucy aunt played by a very campy Bette Davis. She turns out to be the one highlight of this movie even if I don't appreciate what they do to her.

Once moved in, weird things begin to happen. Black spends more and more time in the old lady's room, sitting in a trance while listening to a music box. Reed unconsciously tries to strangle his son to death in the swimming pool and experiences frightening flashbacks to his mother's funeral. Later Montgomery is almost gassed while he sleeps, and Bette Davis, aging overnight, dies of heart failure.

SPORADICALLY sprinkled throughout the movie, the events are uncoordinated and senseless though plenty gruesome. The ending is highly predictable and cheap.

Rather than scare you to death, "Burnt Offerings" merely leaves you tired — wishing you had bought more popcorn.

Furthermore, I don't agree with its PG rating. Even excluding the one final, bloody, suicidal jump scene, the movie remains R material. What value can adolescents receive watching a family destroy itself? There is enough true-to-life misery already.

Why we put ten people at tables designed for twelve.

A knowledgeable caterer knows that little details can make a big difference in the success of a meeting, banquet or party.

And that's why we consider a table's eating space. Not just seating space. And why, for certain meetings, provide shaved ice in the water pitchers, instead of ice cubes. To cut down on distracting noise.

It's a certain kind of thoughtfulness that makes a big difference. And we offer it right along with the availability of gourmet foods. Indoor, out-of-the-weather parking for up to 1,100 cars. A variety of meeting rooms for groups as small as 10, as large as 1,850. Besides the prestige, location, and luxurious accommodations of the Hyatt Regency.

So instead of trying to remember hundreds of details for your next affair, just remember one. Our phone number. (312) 565-1000.

"The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With the Sea" — Offbeat but ponderously played romantic horror story about an English widow (Sarah Miles), an American sailor (Kris Kristofferson) and the gruesome lengths her perversely disturbed son goes to in order to squelch their liaison. (R).

"The Outlaw Josey Wales" — Clint Eastwood heads west again for his fourth directorial effort and strays into PG-rated territory with a "Death Wish"-on-horseback story about a farmer-turned-outlaw who takes a long, long ride from Missouri to Texas avenging the deaths of his wife and son who were slain by Union soldiers. Conceived as an epic western, the story gallops through its action scenes but merely coasts along at other times. Also features Chief Dan George and Sam Bottoms. (PG)

"Gator" — Burt Reynolds reprises his "White Lightning" role as moon-shiner Gator McCluskey, this time on the right side of the law in a scheme to put Dixie vicelord Jerry Reed behind bars. Reynolds also directed, coming up with a well-mounted amalgam of comedy, violence and non-stop action that should cause "Lightning" to strike again at the theaters. (PG)

"The Tenant" — The spirit of a young girl who committed suicide by leaping from her Parisian apartment window possesses the mind and body of the next tenant (Roman Polanski) in Polanski's grimly offbeat but otherwise disappointing horror tale. (R)

"Obsession" — "A masterfully concocted romantic suspense drama, themed to the double-ridden New Orleans businessman who meets up with an exact duplicate of his late wife 16 years after she and his daughter perished during a kidnap caper because he botched their ransom. Brilliant style, a tension-filled storyline and superb performances by Cliff Robertson and Genevieve Bufo. (PG) with her consent, moved in to share her life for several days with camera and crew. It's this completed pilot he hopes will sell the entire series.

Though he believes very strongly in his project, McCallum is rather pessimistic that American networks will buy it.

"Ninety per cent of shows made in America are little more than visual chewing gum," he said.

"There is nothing I would encourage my child to watch because it is all visual chewing gum." (McCallum has two children, 5 and 2) "The brain is better served reading a good book or, for that matter, even a bad one."

"I JUST heard that phrase — visual chewing gum. I kinda like it."

McCallum reads a lot himself. "I try to keep up on the paperback best-seller list. I'm on 'Choir Boys' right now. For fun I read physics."

"I have an English crossword puzzle of a mind. I enjoy reading textbooks." But lest he appear too highbrow, McCallum added, "Mine is a polygraph mind on a multilevel of irrelevance. Intellectual is when it's put to good use. I don't."

Though having set up residence in this country eight years ago, McCallum occasionally returns to England to act or direct. For BBC-TV he directed a series, "Ten Who Dared" (The Explorers), in Morocco.

"I'd like to do more there if they pay me. My mother has a garden with tomatoes she doesn't like to leave in the summer."

KIDS CAN SHOUT and stomp all they want as they learn to become actors in Second City Children's Theater. The group will appear at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Woodfield in a free show titled "Land of the Stage." It's entertaining for kids and adults, too.

Second City Children's Theater at Woodfield

Children's theater is coming to Woodfield at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The Second City Children's Theater brings the same style and free-swinging spontaneity that adults have viewed at the innovative productions in Old Town. The free performance is the group's first appearance in the shopping center at Golf Road and Rte. 53, Schaumburg.

The show, "Land of the Stage," is directed by Josephine Forberg, who has headed the Players Workshop for the past 12 years. The workshop is a training school for actors, many of whom eventually join the Second City cast or go on to stage, television and radio roles.

THE FIRST ACT of this inroduction to the theater arts provides a stretch for the imagination. The kids shout and stomp all they want as they become actors, learning the many ways in which the stage is used. In the second half, fairy tales are rejuvenated by improvisation, with the kids suggesting words for instant songs, acting and interacting with the cast. The staging is simple and the props are few.

A new production is now in rehearsal, "The New Show," opening Oct. 31 at Second City Theater, 1816 N. Wells, Chicago. Performances are at 2:30 p.m. every Sunday. Admission is $1.50 per person. Reservations and arrangements for groups and birthday parties before the show may be made by calling 767-8220.

full day to work up an appetite big enough to do justice to the overly generous servings of food.

Dinner at Speros begins with a relish tray the owners are extremely proud of, and rightfully so. It is highlighted by liver pate, a cheddar cheese spread and pickled corn.

Students to see live theater

American Theater Arts for Youth (TAFY) has scheduled a full season of curriculum-related theater and film for student audiences throughout the Chicago area.

Three live musical productions will play the Athenaeum Theater, 2034 Southport Ave., with weekday performances at 10 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

"Oliver," premiering during a week-long Chicago engagement Nov. 8 to 12, will recreate the adventures of Oliver Twist as it transforms the stage into Dickens' London.

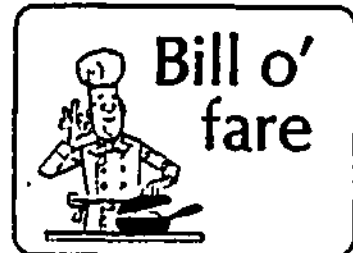

"Pinocchio," which is an adaptation of the favorite fantasy, will take student audiences from a carnival to Candyland to the belly of a whale Dec. 13 to 17.

"Black Noel," a rock gospel celebration of the greatest story ever told, will recount the Nativity through the eyes and hearts of the Black experience in America Dec. 20 to 23.

TEACHERS AND youth leaders who bring their groups to TAFY's live theater and film programs will receive study guides with suggested discussion topics and project ideas to assist them in taking the theater arts experience back to the classroom and community.

In addition to the live theater, TAFY will present a series of curriculum-related films in theaters throughout the greater Chicago area during the fall school term.

Among this season's productions are films based on favorite childhood literature, classics by story-telling masters, as well as great historical dramas. The films open Oct. 22 with E. B. White's contemporary children's classic, "Charlotte's Web."

main entree to contend with. All but the appetizers are included in dinner prices, which are extremely reasonable.

It may be wise to skip the appetizers unless you haven't eaten all day. Even so, they are difficult to pass up.

My guest and I selected snow crab claws, $1.95 and four. Though not very "meaty," they were delicious. Other dinner-starters available include oysters Rockefeller, escargots, shrimp cocktail and shrimp de jargon.

Selecting entrees is difficult with more than 50 items listed on the menu. The butter-dipped lobster, duck and barbecued baby back ribs carried to a nearby table looked excellent. But my dining companion chose the prime rib, $7.25, which was prepared precisely as ordered. I chose the stuffed shrimp, $4.75, which boasted a very rich crabmeat stuffing.

SPEROS IS NOT A plush, expensive dining spot. Tables are crammed together in a small room, which makes for a noisy atmosphere. But service is cordial, quick and efficient.

Only one other caution is needed: Speros does not take reservations for parties of two, so couples should expect to wait 30-45 minutes on week-ends. Or they may wish to arrive early and take advantage of the Early Bird Special: 75 cents off the menu price of any dinner ordered before 6 p.m. on Friday and Saturdays.

The wait, however, is well worth it. It might even give you a bigger appetite. That and a doggie bag are all you'll need.

Opera superstar still is 'Bubbles' to her friends

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

When Beverly Sills — the former Bubbles Silverman — first arrived in San Francisco to sing opera, she stayed in a cubby-hole hotel room and cooked hot dogs over an open radiator.

Now, almost a quarter of a century later, she stays in a grand suite in the Mark Hopkins Hotel, arranged through patron-of-the-arts Cyril Magnin, with its own solarium and flowers and fruits all over the place.

"I feel like a kept woman up there," beams La Silla.

The accommodations are a measure of her progress as a superstar of the opera, maybe the greatest America has ever produced.

Now in the dressing room of the lead baritone — her own was being painted — she sits, relaxed, in a simple chair and answers questions about herself and the world she lives in, frequently punctuating the responses with a vibrant, pealing laugh that comes from the solar plexus.

Does anybody still call you Bubbles?

"Of course. Everybody. My family, my husband. I like it. I've never been called anything else."

YOU'VE STARRED at La Scala, the Met, here, everywhere. What is there still for you to do musically?

"Nothing. (Trilling laugh) That's the whole point. I'm just enjoying. Any time I'm in a situation, you can rest assured I made it that way. Good, bad or indifferent. I created it."

We seem to be living in a negative world. What can you say about positive attitudes?

"At the risk of sounding like Miss Pollyanna, I don't think it's a negative world. In 1976, in the arts, there's a ballet craze going on. This is a freaky city for opera. I've never seen people so freaked out on it."

"We're coming into a whole new generation that hungers for a little beauty in life. We're at peace. I'm 47. I've lived through the Second World War, the Korean War and the Vietnamese War. Now we're going through this tremendous relief period. People stop me on the streets: 'I've got a daughter who's a marvelous singer. Where should she go study?' I love it. I'm a people person anyway."

ARE AMERICANS lowbrow musically?

"No. I think they're one of the most discerning audiences in the world today. We're the biggest classical record buyers. Go to any university for a recital, the audience is very knowledgeable. I think we've come to recognize the American artist — the painter, the sculptor, the dancer, not just the opera singer — as part of our heritage."

What took your own career so long in getting off the ground? There were all those years you didn't sing at the Metropolitan Opera.

"Problems with my children kept me from pursuing my career. (She has a retarded son, now institutionalized. Her daughter was born deaf.) I think the circumstances between Rudolf Bing (former director of the Met) were unusual. We're now very good friends. I signed a contract with the Met within weeks after he left. Because I didn't sing at the Met for 20 years had no effect on my career whatsoever. But I regret we weren't friends all those years because he's a very witty, charming man. We were like star-crossed lovers. We came into each other's lives at the wrong time."

WAS THERE prejudice against you because you were an American product?

"No doubt about it. I proved you can have an international career and become a superstar without the Metropolitan Opera."

How come you never went into the movies, like other divas such as Grace Moore?

"I'd have to get too skinny. I was invited to make 'Manon' with Burt Lancaster directing. I told him I'm too old to put the camera up close to this face, and he said, 'We can photograph you through gauze.' I suggested linoleum. He dropped that idea."

Your major opera breakthrough came in San Francisco. Can you describe it?

"I came here in 1953. I was 24 years old. I toured with the Charles Wagner Touring Company, which used to do 63 one-night stands around the country. Charlie Wagner was a great old pal of Merillat. So was my singing teacher, Estelle Liebling. They both sent a letter at the same time, unbeknownst to each other, urging him to let me sing here. I was going to be his protegee. The day I arrived was the morning after he dropped dead on the podium. Nobody knew who I was when I got here. They didn't know what to do with me. But I got a chance to sing."

WAS YOUR DEBUT at La Scala in 1969 the high point?

"I enjoyed it, but I was very disappointed in the La Scala company. My mother wears a medal of honor around her neck. I gave it to her the night of the Met opening, and it is inscribed with the words of the cable I sent her from La Scala: 'Well, we made it.'"

Why do you still work so hard?

"It's a way of life with me. I'm a workaholic. I have two brothers, one a book publisher, the other an obstetrician, who are exactly the way I am. But this was my last summer of work. Next summer I'm taking July and August off on Martha's Vineyard."

What's your schedule like now?

"I don't sing more than twice a week. Even with nine weeks a year off, I still work 43. Multiply that by two, it makes 86 performances. And that's a lot of performances."

What happens when an opera singer gets a hoarse throat?

"She's out of business. In my whole career I haven't cancelled more than five performances. I pray a lot."

WHEN YOU'RE not singing, what constitutes for you a big night out?

"In New York, a Chinese dinner. All the Jewish girls like Chinese food a lot. And movies. When I get two or three days off, my husband (Peter Greenough) and I get the movie logs and we chart how we can make three movies a day. That's paradise for me."

Are you always so... well, bubbly?

"I was raised in a family where the speech level was at a very high decibel level. My family needs a lot of noise. I guess I'm just a giggler."

Uggams only plus of musical

"West Side Story" billed as a fresh, new Chicago-based version of the 1957 musical classic, may be new — but Wednesday's opening night performance at Arle Crown Theatre, McCormick Place, was a little stale.

S and D Productions, a new Chicago group trying to revitalize the Windy City's offering of live theatre, did give its updated production the old college try.

Leslie Uggams shines as the heart-broken Maria whether she's crooning from a balcony or mourning her brother's death. The slim singer's last major role was as a stewardess in "Skyjack," and it's good to see her musical talents showcased again.

BARRY ARNOLD's dramatic lighting and the imaginative props of Richard Ferrer created a professional Great White Way atmosphere. The backdrops, especially, provided an effective back alley setting without detracting from the dance numbers.

Jerome Robbins' takeoff of Shakespeare as "Romeo and Juliet" evolved into one of the most popular American musicals of all time, and this current production's biggest drawing card is its updating of the fifties' original.

The Jets and the Sharks prepare for their rumble dressed in blue jeans and muscle shirts. The dramatic meeting between the star-crossed lovers, after the killing of the gang leaders Riff and Bernardo, takes place in bed this time around, and the hustle replaces the jitterbug at the school dance.

But long hair and halters, even if they're teamed with a talented star like Miss Uggams, aren't enough to carry an entire production, and it was obvious Wednesday night.

ALTHOUGH THE stage of the Arle Crown was lined with microphones, the sound did not carry well throughout the theatre. While revamped dialogue was punchy and the orchestra did a good job with the jazzy new tempos on the musical numbers, patrons in the back stretch of the balcony had to strain to catch the quieter moments.

Sammy Bayes' choreography is sufficiently slick and well-coordinated, but after a while the graceful leaps and twists start looking remarkably similar. A notable exception is "Gee, Officer Krupke," a high-spirited Jets complaint session that features plenty of amusing acrobatics.

The musical's biggest letdown is the lack of dramatic and vocal support for Miss Uggams. Anthony Mucci as Tony is a disappointment; while he's the sexiest member of the cast, his emulation of Johnny Mathis takes off like a lead balloon.

MOST OF THE gang members appear amateurish, and Marvin Beck as a prejudiced detective proves that even a bit part can be butchered. But Elaine Petricoff is refreshing as Bernardo's girlfriend, and she spices up several otherwise pal numbers.

"WEST SIDE STORY" is an acceptable production and, for the most part, the large crowd that passed up the second Presidential debate in its favor seemed to enjoy it. But several patrons started for the aisles before the curtain call, and at $10 a seat for the main floor it's not worth a family excursion.

The musical will be appearing at McCormick Place through Oct. 17.

Special events celebrate Woodfield's fifth year

Five days of special events, Oct. 13 through 17, in the Grand Court of Woodfield shopping center, Schaumburg, celebrate the center's fifth anniversary. Audience participation is welcomed, though spectators, too, may attend the festivities.

Opening the lively, free birthday bash will be three basketball stars with a demonstration of dribbling and game skills. Leon Hillard, the Wizard of Dribble, played with and coached the Harlem Globetrotters for 23 years. Bobby Milton, famed for his shooting ability with the Trotters for 27 years. And Art Hlicks, who followed the fabulous Goose Tatum to the Harlem All-Stars, averaged 18 points, 15 rebounds during his pro career.

THE THREE PUT on a snappy patter show with the ball moving faster than the eye can follow. And the audience gets a chance to learn some of their tricks and try them out on the spot. The Harlem Globetrotters' show goes on Wednesday at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Bill Quateman brings his backup group, Q, to Woodfield at 7:30 p.m. Thursday for a songfest of folk, rock and pop music. His current group includes bassist John Marsh; keyboardist Ira G. Kart, the Professor; and drummer Dennis Seiwel, a member of Paul McCartney's original Wings. Quateman will invite his listeners to join him in several numbers.

Three programs are scheduled for all five days: the Playmakers' Imagination Theater, disco dancing with Michael Preston and square dancing with Don and Helen Smith.

CAREY, KOOK and Thumbs, the Playmakers, present their Imagination Theater for children at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Oct. 13, 14 and 15 and at 11 a.m., 1 and 3 p.m. Oct. 16 and 17. In their orange, pink and purple costumes, their features exaggerated by makeup, they follow the children's suggestions in music, song, dance, and pantomime that are all part of the spontaneous story.

Michael Preston, who teaches disco dancing at Zorine's and other night clubs, demonstrates and teaches the new line and group dances to Woodfield audiences at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 13, 14 and 15 and at 4 p.m. Oct. 16 and 17. With his partner, Lenae Silvestri, he does the Hustle, the Bus Stop, the Jefferson Davis and others. Free instruction sheets are available for those who wish to practice at home.

"SWING YOUR partner" and "Promenade all" will resound through Woodfield's Grand Court when square dance callers Helen and Don Smith present demonstrations and instruction in the popular pastime. The pair recently gave a series of lessons at the Barn of Barrington and are regular callers for a half dozen suburban park districts.

The square dance schedule is 8:30 p.m. Oct. 13, 14 and 15 and noon Oct. 16 and 17. The Smiths have lined up some area callers to share the mike with them, including Cliff Benson, Jim Stewart and Jim Ford. Outstanding groups from the Metropolitan Square Dance Association and the Lake County Square Dance Association demonstrate the steps the audience is invited to follow.

Presiding over Woodfield's fifth anniversary celebration will be the originator of another famous Fifth, Beethoven. On loan from classical radio station WEFM, the world's largest sculptured bust of the famed composer will go on display during the five-day festivities. More than a century old and carved from a solid block of chestnut wood, the Beethoven head is on tour in connection with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's recording of Beethoven's nine symphonies.

Young musicians wanted

The Suburban Youth Symphony auditions elementary and junior high level students on Saturdays during regular rehearsals at Arlington Heights High School. Persons interested in either the training orchestra or symphony orchestra should phone Mrs. Betty Thorn at 394-2562 for further details and an appointment.

The group is beginning its fifth year under the tutelage of Dr. Russell Harvey, conductor, composer, musician and teacher.

"Although we always have room for dedicated young musicians, in particular we could use more French horns, clarinets, oboes, trombones and string bass at this time," Dr. Harvey stated. "I would encourage any youngster seriously interested in learning to enjoy and perform a variety of challenging music to give this group a try."

THE AUDITIONS ARE conducted individually and informally. Young musicians accepted into the symphony orchestra will perform at two public concerts this season as well as some educational and civic events.

To date 52 young musicians from all over the Northwest suburbs have been accepted for participation in the symphony orchestra and 26 students for the training orchestra.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Heredity a factor in heart disease

My question stems from the apparent high incidence of heart attacks in my husband's family. His father suffered his first attack at age 35. What can my husband do to avoid such a fate? It cannot all be controlled by diet and exercise. I have heard that aspirin is a possible preventative in that it opens the vessels and serves to kind of cleanse them. I even know of two doctors who take two aspirins every morning like vitamins. Is this advisable? What is the current status of research into vitamin C in prevention? Can this help? Is Atromid-S a prescription drug? Would it prevent the atherosclerosis that is in his family?

I am looking for help in preventing heart and vessel trouble. There are so many rumors, I would like the truth.

The genes one inherits are important in whether or not one develops heart disease, but genes are only one factor. Many people with long-lived parents, free of heart and vascular disease, develop problems earlier in life because of their life style, diet and habits.

Men from families with a high incidence of heart attacks at an early age are more prone to heart disease and need special attention. We emphasize diet, exercises and stopping smoking because such a program greatly decreases the likelihood of heart and vascular disease or at least postpones it. That does not mean that everyone will be protected by such measures. However, if you lengthen the lifespan 10 or more years or protect 50 per cent of the potential victims, that is a significant accomplishment.

Your husband is subject to the same risk factors other men have. If his cholesterol is high, he needs to lower it. If that can be done with diet alone, fine. If not, he may need to take medicines. One of these commonly used is Atromid-S and it is a prescription drug. If his blood pressure is on the high side, he needs to lower it. Often this can be done with weight control but if not, then medicines are available to lower the pressure.

Remember the three big risk factors are elevated cholesterol, elevated blood pressure and cigaret smoking. Diet with weight control will favorably affect both the cholesterol and blood pressure if enforced adequately. Diet often fails because the person may need to lose 20 pounds and only loses 10. Half enough often isn't even half as good.

Aspirin is being studied for its role in preventing heart attacks. Its action is through its anti-clotting action. This action increases the tendency to bleed. No one with any disorder, such as a peptic ulcer, that may bleed should take aspirin. Because of this, it is better to check with your doctor before trying such an experiment on your own. Aspirin does not lower cholesterol or blood pressure.

Vitamin C helps prevent atherosclerosis or even reverse it in animals that are deficient in the vitamin. Its role in man in prevention or the opposite, causing atherosclerosis, is a matter of dispute.

I am sending you The Health Letter No. 3-12, After The Heart Attack, because a person should be following the program suggested there before an attack as well, if he wants to prevent it. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Kitty granules helped remove mattress odor

Dear Dorothy: I have a mattress with a pretty cover which is completely unstained. However, my daughter thinks it should be thrown away because of the body odor it seems to have picked up. Is there a way to remove this odor? — Mrs. B.J.I.

Your daughter may have logic on her side because mattresses, as a rule, are not easy to recondition. Odors which have gone into the stuffing can come back even when the surface is treated. However, there are a couple of home remedies you may want to experiment with. One is to sponge with ammonia water and follow with a second sponging with clear water. This process is repeated several times and the mattress then allowed to dry. The other way is the granules used in kitten boxes. They have remarkable absorptive qualities. One reader with such a mattress problem sprinkled in the granules heavily, put on a fitted sheet to keep them in place and left it for two weeks; then reversed the mattress and the process. She said the odor vanished.

Dear Dorothy: Interesting column you did about how so many of our "American" foods are like our people — foreigners by ancestry. You didn't go into the potato family deeply enough. Did you know about the potato's wanderings? Born in Peru, moved to Spain (circa 1520), then to Florida about 1560, to England from there and only then to Ireland. From there it came back via New England and Virginia. — Lee Christie, P.H.D.

Dear Dorothy: People on low sodium diets might like to season green beans the way we do. Add one teaspoon lemon juice and one-quarter teaspoon of dry mustard to four tablespoons of melted margarine. — Hester Wise.

(Mrs. Rita welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005.)

Now the question is—will success spoil Liz Ray?

The event was Thursday afternoon's Pheasant Run Playhouse press conference with Elizabeth Ray, who should require minimal further identification.

Gilda Moss conducted the press briefing. She carried press kits that discussed Elizabeth Ray and her upcoming theater debut in "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?"

Gilda walked into the Legislature Meeting Room. Other rooms are named Kennedy, Eisenhower, Jefferson, Lincoln and Washington.

It seemed appropriate that Miss Ray's conference would be conducted in the Legislature Room.

QUESTIONS BEGAN. What about Miss Ray and this "Will Success..." play? A gamble, wasn't it?

"Most of our groups are senior citizen women who usually come to the Wednesday matinee," Gilda said. "I thought, 'Oh, no, we're going to lose them.'"

"No way! They want to sit right up front."

The Milwaukee Sentinel reporter greeted Gilda and took a chair. Her name is Dorothy Austin, a nice woman, perhaps 50 years old, who takes extensive notes.

"This is good column stuff," Dorothy said, "but I don't know what else. There's been so much written about Elizabeth Ray. I don't know what else one can ask."

"WILL SUCCESS..." is Miss Ray's stage debut, unless you count the 33-year-old's affair with former U.S. Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, plus a small role in the motion picture "Scorpio."

Rehearsal for "Will Success..." has been an eight-hour daily project. The official run will be next Wednesday evening through Sunday, Nov. 14.

Tickets are selling well. Even the Associated Press plus Time and Newsweek magazines plan to attend.

Gilda lit a cigaret. "We're smoking only until she (Elizabeth) gets here. She has asthma," Gilda said.

One by one news reporters walked up a short flight of stairs above this playhouse. Either they were curious, or they had been assigned to the story.

A PAPERBACK book, "Washington Fringe Benefit," is being sold under Miss Ray's byline. That supposedly is her story. A motion picture, "Fringe Benefit," will star Miss Ray.

"I heard her say she was really very unhappy with the book," Gilda said.

"With the way it's selling (like hotcakes) or how it turned out?" I asked.

"The way it turned out," Gilda said. "She was supposed to see the galley proofs and never did."

Gilda then produced Genealea magazine, a publication for men. The magazine's cover screams: "Exclusive! First nude photos of ELIZABETH RAY. See the congressmen's mistress in all her naked glory!"

DOROTHY AUSTIN flipped open the magazine and began to count pictures of Elizabeth. She said there were 11.

Elizabeth Ray walked quietly into the room and was accompanied by just a few hangers-on. They shuttled her to a chair directly opposite mine.

"Nice to meet you," Elizabeth told everyone.

Then the ceaseless barrage started. Did she enjoy rehearsals? How did she find press conferences? What about royalties from her book?

Elizabeth said that rehearsals are long, press conferences difficult and royalties small.

SHE DISCUSSED the possibility of a lawsuit being filed over her book. One co-author had removed her own name after seeing how it would be published. Their own version had not included any "four-letter words."

Miss Ray complained about "things that had been inserted, things that had been scratched out. They made it so that it would sell real well. They didn't care how it made me look," she said.

Elizabeth Ray is public property now. Of course, she asked for that status by admitting, "Sure, I slept with Wayne Hays many times, and other girls sleep with politicians, too." In not exactly those same words.

The news reporters continued their exhaustive probe. One woman asked about Elizabeth's family. "My mother... we're not very close," Miss Ray said. "She's had a lot of trouble over this. They've harassed her."

Who has harassed her mother?

"The press," Elizabeth said.

THIS SEGMENT of the press dug into her further. Reporters asked about her presidential preference, whether this Hays affair uproar had been worth the trouble and if any man could truly love her.

They asked about any regrets. One, she said. "Being removed from my other world so fast. Every move I make leads to another. It goes so fast," Elizabeth said. "I can't control it."

Today

Hardly a nickel and dime question was overlooked. Miss Ray responded that girlfriends had encouraged her to live in Washington. Yes, her favorite actresses are Goldie Hawn, Sally Struthers and Mary Tyler Moore.

No, she does not have many close friends. Yes, she is often lonely, although it has been somewhat better recently. Yes, there is pressure. Yes, she needs a vacation.

Elizabeth always answered the questions patiently. She spoke quietly and looked directly at the little panel of newspaper jurists. "I've had a lot of problems," she said.

A SHORT SILENCE fell now. Here was the first good chance. "What are your impressions of Marilyn Monroe's life?" I asked.

Elizabeth Ray quivered in her chair. This new question seemed to frighten her.

"I knew that was coming," she said.

"She must have had a sad life," Elizabeth said regarding Monroe, Hollywood's famous blonde beauty who tragically died from an overdose of sleeping pills.

"I hope that mine doesn't end that way," Elizabeth said. "I feel very sorry for what happened to her."

She complained about being treated "like a piece of machinery." "I'm not the worst person in the world." "I haven't been convicted of any crime." "I was honest." Those are Elizabeth Ray's protests.

IN SO MANY respects, she seems to be a confused and perhaps totally misunderstood person who insists, "I cry, I laugh, I get sick, I feel good. Unfortunately, I don't feel that good anymore."

One o'clock approached. Time to end this junket into Elizabeth Ray's mind. She was due back stage now for more long hours of rehearsal. Everyone bid adieu.

"Sarah, take Elizabeth downstairs," Gilda Moss said. "I'll meet you there."

Their little entourage shuffled off into the hallway. Elizabeth looked in both directions, wondering which way she should walk to find the stairway.

"I'm confused," she said. Truer words Elizabeth Ray might never have spoken. Either that, or hers has been an Academy Award winning performance all along.

Firms use handwriting to evaluate job hopefuls

NEW YORK (UPI) — A recent announcement by International Business Machine Corp. that it no longer digs into the private and emotional lives of job applicants serves to remind that there are other ways to evaluate workers' personalities.

One method is handwriting analysis. It is used by many companies and is quite successful so long as the handwriting evaluator is qualified and licensed. Psychologists or psychiatrists, says Dr. Harry Teltcher of New York, author of a leading book on the subject (Handwriting: Revelation of Self, Hawthorne, 1971).

"The beauty of using handwriting to evaluate personality is that you don't have to ask the subject embarrassing questions," Teltcher said. "You simply provide space on the application blank for a specimen of the writing, study its characteristics and interpret them in the light of sound psychological principles."

IBM SAID it had discovered asking people intensely personal questions was self-defeating, that educational and job performance records were much more reliable, although for some sensitive jobs personality checks were necessary.

Although handwriting analysis or graphology, as it is popularly called, has been practiced by charlatans, it has a long and respectable history. Cesare Lombroso, the noted 19th Century Italian psychiatrist and criminologist, was a warm advocate of it. Forensic graphology, the detection of forgeries and identification of individuals by means of signatures is of vital importance to law and business.

Fine, expensive wines keep her firm thriving

HONG KONG (UPI) — Vicki Chiang, surrounded by enough liquor to delight the choicest connoisseur, says she is a firm believer in the Latin saying "In Vino Veritas" — In wine there is truth.

The attractive Miss Chiang is at 29 the only woman in this British colony to be manager of an independent private company serving as importers and wholesalers of fine wines and other spirits. She has Ciybon (H.K.) Limited thriving in spite of intense competition.

After more than two years as the top executive under the board of directors, Miss Chiang, who once didn't know what Armagnac was or the correct way to drink tequila, has become so knowledgeable she speaks like the expert she is about the expensive drinks she handles. They are so costly they appeal to only about two per cent of the market here.

"There are a lot of people who would like to see this young firm sink," Miss Chiang said. "But we're doing well and expect to do even better because we concentrate on a specialized market" — the hotels, clubs and individuals who can afford and want the costly stocks.

Once a year the discriminating Miss Chiang makes a trip to the suppliers in France, Scotland, Finland and Germany, continually on the lookout for a rare vintage appealing to epicurean tastes.

Other than the trips, she said, "Running this company means practically always being behind the desk." Lifting a stack of folders and papers, she explained: "There are accounts to be checked and bad debts to be tracked down. Then I try to teach the sales people all they need to know about quality in liquor."

While many countries in Southeast Asia are currently overstocked with alcoholic beverages, Miss Chiang still plans to start exporting to Taiwan and Japan and possibly expand exports if government restrictions in the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia ease.

The company, with a perpetually locked gate even during business hours, carries about 100 varieties of liquor, sold by the case or bottle. The most expensive are Grand Cognac Reserve Du Roi at 2,480 Hong Kong dollars ($492) per case; and among wines, Chateau Mouton Rothschild, Pauillac, 1973, at 2,388 Hong Kong dollars ($477) a case or 190 Hong Kong dollars ($40) per bottle. The least costly are the house wines at 192 Hong Kong dollars ($38) per case.

Miss Chiang, a New York University graduate who became a public relations officer with the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, said, "It certainly wasn't my knowledge about liquor that started me off, but my public relations experience helped."

After working in marketing and assisting the former manager for two years, she was named his replacement and was "immediately sent to Bordeaux for a crash course from the supplier there."

While surrounded by samples, Miss Chiang sips nothing but bottled water at work but admits her tastes have changed considerably from her "cheap scotch days" to the quality she now prefers.

"I think a person who does not drink misses a great deal in life," she said. "I have found the personalities of many nondrinkers are different. They are often less liberal and less susceptible to new ideas."

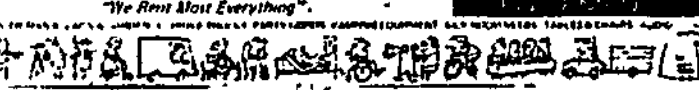

"What is the point of going to an elegant restaurant and ordering oysters without the accompaniment of Black Velvet or champagne?" she asked.

While acknowledging she has become somewhat spoiled in her taste for spirits, Miss Chiang drinks whatever her hostess is serving.

It's great year for French wines

BEAUNE, France (UPI) — Manuel Garcia, a worker in the vineyards of Burgundy, put on blue swimming trunks. He climbed up a ladder to the top of a wine vat and leaped into what might be one of the best wine crops France has known in more than a dozen years.

Grimacing broadly, Garcia, a Spanish immigrant, thrust his legs into the grapes to let in air to aid the fermentation. Bits of the juice — that after 10 years of aging will grace crystal glasses in luxurious Paris or Geneva or New York restaurants — clung to the bush black hair on his chunky legs.

Two floors down in a damp cellar bulging with oak barrels, Gerard Potel, proprietor of La Pousse D'Or vineyard, which makes the Volnay and Pommard wines, sipped the freshly pressed juice and whooped. "This has got to be probably the best wine since 1964 — the last time we had a drought."

A history-making drought dried up most of Europe this past summer, bringing disaster to French farmers — except those growing grapes.

The daily hot sun dried some vines, Potel explained, but nonetheless brought thick skins to the small Pinot Noir grapes grown on the gentle slopes of the Bourgogne (Burgundy) region. Thick skins mean a strong color and protect the fruit.

The extra sunshine also produced an unusually high amount of sugar in the grapes, which under fermentation turns into alcohol. Thus this year the wine will not have to be spiked with cane sugar to produce more alcohol (a practice called chaptalization, which is legal for adding 2 degrees of alcohol to Bourgogne wines).

Over most of France the exceptional sunshine brought excitement to the grape areas. Beaujolais wine is predicted by growers to be better than last year and Champagne to be fruitier and more alcoholic. Alsatian wines are said to be superb.

A spokesman for the Burgundy Wine Growers' Association in Beaune cautiously said, "It will be great year. Without quite so much drought, it would have been exceptional."

"This wine has body, it has a robe," said grower Potel in the rapturous vocabulary of wine experts. When the wine has a "robe" the redness clings to the glass, meaning a brilliant color.

The usual quiet village of Volnay South of Joponne where Potel grows wine was tense with excitement. Women were washing the grape stain off the workmen's rubber workclothes in ancient stone vats just as Burgundians have done for centuries.

North of Beaune in the village of Morey St. Denis, winegrower Jacques Seysses looked anxiously at an iron weather vane atop his 300-year-old stone farmhouse before he sped in a truck to his vineyards.

"I am practically the last to harvest. I waited for another two days of sun, a terrible risk, it could have rained," said Seysses. "Our tests on the grapes show 92 to 95 per cent sugar, meaning 13-14 per cent alcohol" (In France most wines have 11 per cent).

"We know already it will be a good wine, just by looking at the color and checking for sugar."

Like other growers, Seysses hires temporary labor for the harvest including young foreigners fascinated by the mystique of French wine.

Five years ago one of Seysses' pickers was Rosalind Boswell of San Francisco, just graduated from the University of California at Berkeley. Love blossomed over the grapes and they were married.

"It's a nice life," said dark-haired Rosalind, now 27, carrying her baby, Jeremy, 1, while she watched the pickers, this year New Zealand and English youths plus some French students.

"We're very excited about this year's wine. Usually wine grapes are more bitter than table grapes but this year ours are sweet."

France's winegrowers usually harvest in October. But by the end of September the rapidly matured grapes had been cut, the pickers snipping close to the vine with garden-clipper filled plastic dishpan-size tubs, then emptied those into a plastic container strapped to the back of one worker who walked up and down the vine rows. He in turn dumped his 99 pound load into a truck which took the fruit to metal vats in the winery next to the grower's home.

Potel, Seysses and other top wine growers have seeding and pressing machines and those plastic containers strapped to the worker's backs have replaced the charming wooden or woven ones of yore for sanitary reasons. But feet still are used in the first pressing and mixing because "you can feel the temperature of the fermentation and mix better with feet," Seysses explained. A worker also uses a gadget like a toilet plunger to break the crust that forms on top of the fermenting grapes.

After going through pressing and seeding machines, the juice is pumped through tubes to barrels in the moldy 13th-century wine cellars beneath the growers' beige stone 17th century farmhouses.

After all of the sugar has turned to alcohol, a process lasting two or three months, burgundy wine is run by tubes into other barrels in a lower, cooler cellar to sit for from six months to a year. Then it is bottled to wait for at least three years before it can be drunk.

French wines must be named for the vineyard, village and/or the region where the grapes are grown. Seysses makes both Morey St. Denis and Gevrey-Chambertin wines, and Potel's labels say either Pommard or Volnay, as both own a few acres in one village and a few in another, the usual French patchwork farm custom.

The grapes from the different vineyards owned by one grower have to be kept separate by law. Even though one vineyard is a minute's walk from another, the wine from each tastes quite different because of the soil and exposure to the sun.

The village areas of pale green, yellow and rose vineyards that give their names to world famous wines are astonishingly small.

The signs in the vineyards that say "Gevrey-Chambertin begins here" and "Gevrey-Chambertin ends here" mark an area the size of two football fields.

But the grapes are planted so close together, with every speck of earth used, that Seysses gets 35,000 bottles of wine a year (selling at around 35 francs or $7.50) while Potel averages 50,000.

Potel and Seysses, both 35, are examples of the new variety of wine growers. Neither inherited the land. Both chose the profession. Seysses was a marketing major at the University of Paris. The son of a wealthy biscuit manufacturer, he got interested in wine and scouted around for a farm to buy, as did Potel, son of a vegetable farmer in the Paris area.

Ask Andy

Moist climate best for redwoods

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Neal Bretz, 9, of St. Helena, Wash., for his question:

WHY DO THE BIG REDWOOD TREES GROW ONLY IN NORTH-EAST CALIFORNIA?

Most plants and animals need a particular environment to grow and reproduce properly. The perfect spot for the giant redwood trees is in northwestern California and southwestern Oregon. These regions have frequent summer fogs, which contribute greatly to the redwoods' survival.

Sometimes weeks go by in the redwood forest without so much as a hint of rain. The cool air that moves onto the coast has scant moisture, and as it rises over the mountains it is not chilled enough to produce rain. However, the filmy gray fogs that drift in almost daily from the sea help the big trees conserve their precious water supply. In addition, the tiny fog droplets that collect on the needlelike leaves merge into larger drops that fall to the forest floor, adding moisture for the thirsty roots.

Redwoods commonly grow taller than 200 feet, and the tallest ones stretch up more than 300 feet. You would expect a tree this tall to have a mighty root system — and the redwood does. However the roots are not so large as you would think. And while they may spread over several acres, they are just under the surface of the soil.

These roots are great for absorbing moisture from the forest floor, but they do not do much to anchor the tree when the wild winds blow. Fortunately, the big trees grow in crowded groves, and the intertwining roots of many trees form an underground community structure that helps to support the entire grove.

High among the lacy, pale-green foliage may be found small brown cones. These crusty cones contain the seeds that may produce new redwood trees. A few seeds ripen under each of the cone's scales and fall to the ground, the seeds are about one-sixteenth of an inch long and so light that it would take about 7,700 of them to weigh one ounce. A parent tree will produce millions of these seeds in its lifetime, and it is estimated that one seed will grow in the parent grove for each billion seeds produced.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Cindi Cervone, 13, of Stratford, Conn., for her question:

HOW IS BALLPOINT-PEN INK DIFFERENT FROM FOUNTAIN-PEN INK?

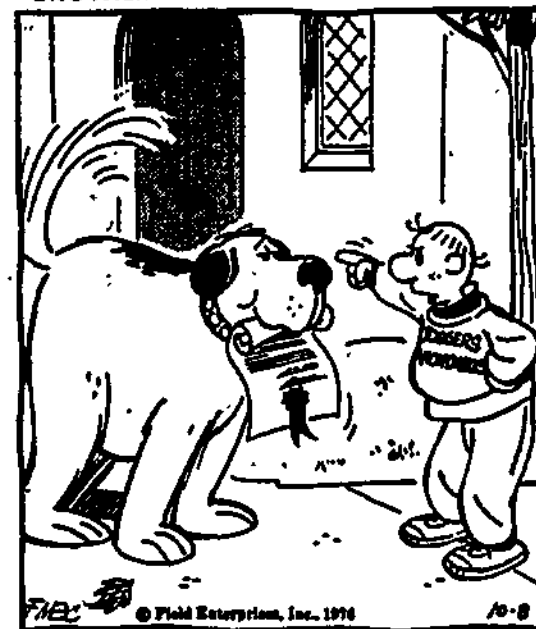

The ink in a fountain pen is watery-thin. Pressure on the tip releases the ink, which is held in a rubber sac, cartridge, or several tiny tubes or channels. Some permanent fountain-pen inks contain iron sulfate, tannic acid and dyes dissolved in purified water. To prevent the growth of mold or bacteria, a preservative such as carbolic acid is added. Another kind of permanent ink uses a direct dye instead of iron sulfate and tannic acid. This holds so strongly to paper that it is both wash-and-fade-proof. Washable fountain-pen inks are made of purified water, soluble dyes and a preservative.

At the tip of a ballpoint pen is a small rotating ball that continually inks itself as it turns. The ink is syrupy thick because it must flow slowly. Made by dissolving dye in glycol or in certain alcohols, about 40 per cent is dye, which gives even very fine lines a strong dark mark, either permanent or washable.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Lengthy questions hinder debate

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Ford and Jimmy Carter are limited to three-minute answers in the presidential debates — but unfortunately for the audience there was no limit on the length of questions in the second debate.

Some of those questions actually timed out to almost half the allowable limit for the answers. Max Frankel of The New York Times seemed an engaging fellow with a firm grasp of foreign policy, but short questions weren't his long suit. His fellow panelists, Henry Trewhitt of the Baltimore Sun and Richard Valeriani of NBC, were less long-winded — but not exactly concise.

If the questions in the final debate are going to turn into speeches, maybe the candidates ought to demand equal time.

Unfortunately for the audience, the interrogators failed to spell out in detail what they were asking about.

QUESTIONS ABOUT Cruise missiles, the proliferation controversy and various metric tons of wheat were answered in kind by the candidates but probably left large segments of the audience wondering whether MIRVing a missile was hazardous to their health.

Again both candidates tended to speechify, rather than truly debate, although on occasion they came out from behind their images to jab at each other or actually trade a few verbal punches. At other times, they gave the answers they were prepared to give, regardless of the question.

Ford, emphasizing his on-the-job training for president, took no notes and exhibited a wooden poise and mostly smooth diction, although at one point he did stumble into something about "it was the action of me, President Ford."

Carter was smoother on the syntax than in the first debate, but by no means slick. He again seemed nervous initially, then settled down, but he groped for phrases on occasion. If he were able to relax in his speech, as when he talked about embargoes meaning no this, no that, "no nothing" he might come off better.

Weak bids tell too much

South was using a weak notrump opening and had to open with one club. This made it easy for West to overcall with one diamond and East to bid two spades after North bid two clubs.

South was still able to get to three notrump and West opened a spade. East was allowed to hold the trick with his jack and shifted to the 10 of diamonds. South went right up with his ace and knocked out West's ace of clubs. West led a club back whereupon South cashed the good clubs, the ace of spades and dummy's ace-king of hearts to come down to a four-card ending.

He held the queen 10 of hearts and queen-four of diamonds. West was known to have either three diamonds to the king and one heart or four diamonds, so South was able to lead a heart and finess his 10 with perfect safety. The finesse worked and South had nine tricks — if it failed he would still have nine tricks.

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

The game was match-point duplicate and South pointed out how his bidding had given him a top score.

East and West kept silent, but checked when the game was over to find out that most North players had made four notrump. It seems that after normal bidding of one notrump-three notrump the West players had opened a diamond to give declarer two diamonds, one spade, three clubs and three hearts and somehow or other most declarers had worked that heart finesse play out.

Vikings and Bison in North headliner

Herald Staff Report

How times change.

A couple of years ago they were a league doormat. The records they were setting were ones of futility. The games they were playing were plagued by frustration.

How times change. Fremd moves toward the middle of the 1976 football campaign as a genuine contender for Mid-Suburban League laurels. In 1974 they lost all eight games on their schedule and were outscored 67-104.

After four weeks in 1976 they are on the crest of a three-game winning streak and have outscored the opposition 74-27.

And the Vikings will be meeting Buffalo Grove Saturday in what could conceivably be a title tilt.

The Vike-Bison shootout is one of three bouts on the North Division docket this weekend and is easily the one demanding the most attention. Palatine will be at Arlington and Hersey will be at Wheeling for Friday night contests to round out the action.

Fremd head coach Joe Samojedny and Bison mentor Grant Blaney would probably be the last two individuals to say that championship emphasis is riding on a match so early in the season. But the fact that both clubs take 3-1 overall records into the game and that both have won their opening divisional clashes does allow for a certain amount of importance.

"We're very concerned about this game," noted Blaney. "Fremd gave us a good game last year and they looked like a 100 per cent improved club now. They have excellent team balance too. With five or six very capable backs there's no way we can key on anybody."

Samojedny sees a pretty similar picture in Buffalo Grove: "From our scouting reports their quarterback, (Scott) Groot, can throw well and especially deep. They have good receivers, good backs and a good line to complement him as well."

What the coaches seem to be saying is that the key to this 2 p.m. Saturday headliner will probably lie in the trenches. The two teams have combined to register 175 points in four games. The area's top two scorers (John MacIsaac of Buffalo Grove with 28 points and Fremd's Tom Philippe with 20) will be represented on the field tomorrow.

Who, then, can come up with the better defensive performance?

The Vikes have allowed only 27 points this year, one of the most impressive statistics around. "Our success has been our ability to adjust to different situations and, physically, we've been able to stay in very good shape," pointed out Samojedny.

Buffalo Grove has scored a lot and also given up a lot on the scoreboard. "Our defense started the season very inexperienced," observed Blaney. "It's been improving week by week. This may be the time it has to come of age."

PALATINE AT ARLINGTON

The area's two oldest schools collide at 8 p.m. on the Redbird field tonight, both in quest of their first North Division victory.

"I think it's still on," said Arlington pilot Chuck Haines of the divisional race. "It will be very difficult for a team to get through it undefeated so I consider us still very much in the running."

Haines and Palatine coach Arv Herstedt have more in common than simply wanting to get back into the hunt this week at the expense of each other. Neither side has been able to generate a consistently strong offense this fall.

"Traditionally, Arlington is always tough but they seem to be having the same kind of problems on offense that we're having," acknowledged Herstedt.

But the Palatine coach added, "They said before the season started that if Arlington could find a quarterback they'd be in good shape because they had good receivers. Now with this (Chuck) Klein kid it looks like they have their man."

The Pirates will be hoping to take another step toward evening up a series that Arlington has dominated in six of the past ten years. Palatine won last year, 24-7.

There have been four shutouts in the series and a variety of outcomes ranging from a 48-0 Card rout in 1966 to a 7-6 Pirate squeaker in '71.

HERSEY AT WHEELING

For eight years, since 1968, Wheeling has been waiting for a "down" year at Hersey so that they might halt the Huskies' dominating ways.

Coach Joe Gilwa's Hersey gang is not exactly down now, by most measures. Their 2-2 start, including a less than awesome 4-0 triumph over Arlington last week is not their most impressive start though. It's sort of a down year for the Huskies.

Unfortunately, it's sort of a more down year for Wheeling so far in 1976.

The Wildcats are in the midst of a nine-game conference losing skid. They have won just one of their past 32 MSL outings. And they have lost four straight to open the 1976 campaign.

"Cat coach Jerry Cline is like the guy in the story being told to cheer up because things could be worse. The guy cheers up and sure enough, things get worse."

"At least we don't have to worry about getting the kids up for this one. It's a big rivalry game and they'll be ready," Cline smiled. "We were outmanned last year, too, and still gave them a real good game."

Cline is also optimistic over the idea that Bob Steinberg, a halfback sidelined by injury since before the season began, may be ready to play tonight.

Gilwa is fully aware of Wheeling's attitude: "I expect them to play their best game of the year against us because we are the defending champs. That would make a big difference in their season if they could beat us... make everything worthwhile. We're very aware of the danger of taking them too lightly."

South teams chase Grens

Herald Staff Report

The fox has been released. Now it's up to the hounds to catch it.

The fox in this case is highly-regarded Elk Grove who has already out-foxed three successive opponents en route to the top rung on the Mid-Suburban League's South Division ladder.

Nobody will track down the Grenadiers, who will host and tangle with a non-conference foe Notre Dame tonight, despite a full slate of games this weekend. But at least two teams may pick up the scent.

In key homecoming clashes, Schaumburg (1-2) tackles Forest View (1-2) and Conant (1-1) challenges Rolling Meadows (1-2) tonight at 8 p.m. while Hoffman Estates (1-1) lavishes Prospect (1-1) to a homecoming celebration Saturday at 2 p.m. in perhaps the most important match of the weekend.

Both coaches in Saturday's shootout are understandably cautious. Hoffman bent Forest View which beat Prospect. The combination scares Knight coach Gary Grouwink.

"We're just going to have to play really well to get anything done," said Grouwink who was most impressed with his team's ability to sustain scoring drives in a 29-22 triumph over Conant last week.

Mike Frushour earned plaudits for both his outstanding play at defensive cornerback and for booting a MSL record 44-yard field goal. Paul Izban and Danny Keller also starred on defense while Pat Murphy was the top offensive threat.

ONE OF THE BEST ball carriers in the Northwest in 46 carries (6.2 average) — fourth best in the Suburbs is Elk Grove's Shawn Murphy. This Grenadier has shoved aside tacklers to amass 286 yards.

Hawks tip Blues 6-4 in opener

ST. LOUIS — Pat Martin scored two goals Thursday night to give the Chicago Black Hawks a 6-4 victory and ruin Emile Francis' debut as coach of the St. Louis Blues.

Martin scored on a power play in the second minute of the game, banging in a Stan Mikita rebound, and the Black Hawks never trailed although the Blues did manage to tie the score at 3-3. Martin also scored on another power play at 19:17 of the second period on a 20-footer.

Bobby Orr scored his first goal in a Chicago uniform, and Cliff Koroll, Ivan Boldirev and Mikita also scored for the Hawks. Boldirev broke the 3-3 tie near the end of a double minor penalty on Jerry Butler for slashing and unsportsmanlike conduct.

Pierre Plante had tied the score on a St. Louis power play. The other St. Louis goals were by Gerry Unger on a 35-footer, by Bob MacMillan and Claude Larose.

The Montreal Canadiens, defending Stanley Cup champions, got two goals each from Guy Lafleur, Yvan Cournoyer and Steve Shutt as they gunned down the Pittsburgh Penguins, 10-1.

Bill MacMillan scored a short handed goal midway through the third period to spark the New York Islanders to a 3-0 win over the Philadelphia Flyers.

Tom Lysiak and Eric Vail scored a goal and an assist each as the Atlanta Flames handed the Los Angeles Kings a 4-2 defeat.

But so far, no scouting report has been accurate against Prospect. As Bill Gourley of Hoffman explains, "We expect everything from Prospect. I've seen them throw a lot and then they'll come back and hardly throw at all. You just don't know what to expect from them. We hope to be ready for anything."

Hoffman tuned up for the Knights by walloping Luther South, 29-0, causing Gourley to remark, "We were able to throw the ball a little bit, our pass protection has improved 100 per cent and there were three (passes) I know of that were touchdowns but were dropped." Rolling Meadows also had a case of "dropsies" against Schaumburg last week, fueled by the injury of the Mustangs' top receiver Steve Stiert on the first play of the game.

"It's just a bruise on his knee and the doctor gave him permission to play," Meadows head coach Art Meadows said.

Fremd in 'driver's seat' after run past Palatine

by ART MUGALIAN
Cross Country Editor

Fremd's cross country team, ranked fourth in the state in one poll, first had to prove they were the best team in Palatine — and the Vikings did just that Thursday afternoon at Palatine Hills Golf Course.

Running before an overflow crowd of spectators, coach Ron Menely's Fremd harriers bumped off the highly regarded Palatine squad, 26-29, and at the same time disposed of Central Suburban League power Maine West, 24-35.

Outstanding Fremd senior John Filosa was the individual winner in 14:30 on the 2.65-mile course, which ends on a challenging toboggan hill.

Tom Johnson of Palatine was second (14:32) and Maine West's Brian Tolson was third (14:34).

After Filosa, the Vikings packed four runners in the top 11 finishers — Rolando Garza (6th), Matt Filosa (8th), Bob Ratcliffe (9th), and Dan Inbody (11th).

The win over Palatine shoves Fremd to the top of the MSL North dual-meet standings at 4-0 and virtually guarantees the Vikings the Division title. Palatine fell to 3-1.

"It's amazing we did it without (Dan) Tischler," said an elated Menely after the race. "Danny was third at the mile-and-a-half but he got pushed into a bridge."

Tischler, a senior and normally Fremd's No. 2 man, wound up 11th over-all. The double victory also gave Fremd 57 consecutive dual-meet triumphs over a period of six seasons, a new IHSA record.

"Right now we're not even thinking about the record," said Menely. "I suppose I'll wake up tomorrow and think, hey, I coached a team that didn't lose a dual meet for six years."

"But the two biggest things about this win are that we're now in the driver's seat in the conference, and two of our runners found themselves out there — Garza and Inbody."

Fremd had a 25-second spread between Nos. 1 and 5.

It's that time again when readers become editors

It was only a matter of time before the gripes started.

You usually start on a honeymoon of two or three weeks each fall while readers, reeled from the summer, take notes on how they feel their school is "sighted" in the newspaper.

Readers spend the third and fourth weeks of the fall season comparing notes and planning strategy on how to attack the newspaper's policies. Letter and phone campaigns may be plotted. There may be some personal appearances.

It's funny (no, not really) how many people feel they know how to run a newspaper. I suppose these same folks also feel they know how to coach.

They may sell insurance or real estate or automobiles full-time, but they're newspaper editors part-time.

"I know what your readers want," they insist. They honestly believe they understand the pulse of the entire circulation area. That "pulse" often means their own special-interest group.

It's understandable — to a degree.

When a reader is so close to a particular school or sport, it admittedly may be difficult to recognize the needs of a newspaper, the depth of research that dictates decisions.

Some readers just want to see their school or sport splashed prominently with pictures in the paper. They're not interested in what readers might want who have other sports interests or who don't have children in school.

They're simply not interested in the vital cross-section that every newspaper must reach in a changing market.

I get the feeling we're expected to serve as public relations tools for area schools and make news judgments based not on professional training but on the scrapbook parents keep of their child's activities.

Because of the very unusual nature of this circulation area, with towns and schools packed on top of each other and jealousies abounding everywhere, readers often become paranoid.

As the area grows, the paranoia grows. It obviously won't get any better unless every event is photographed and every game receives a big spread. Otherwise, the gripes will continue.

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

"Well, The Herald did it again! No pictures of our school. They don't like us, and they always favor that other school. And who cares about the Bears? I don't understand why they have to slant everything either."

Sports reporters try not to slant stories between two area teams for obvious reasons, but many readers still examine between the lines. They desperately search for "bias" from the reporters. They jump on verbs and adjectives as "too negative" or leads as "too slanted."

I wonder how a reporter might have handled the story if he had been assigned to cover the famous Georgia Tech and Cumberland game in 1916? Georgia Tech won by the incredible score of 223-0.

What if the reporter kept thinking: "Don't slant the story! Be fair! Watch the adjectives and verbs! Don't offend the Cumberland readers! They already say we favor Georgia Tech."

Can you imagine how the story might have appeared if the writer and coaches involved were conscious of going "down the middle," trying not to infuriate the fans and coaches of Cumberland?

ATLANTA, Ga. — Georgia Tech scored early and went on to record a 223-0 victory over scrappy Cumberland here Saturday afternoon.

The Yellowjackets, coached by John Heisman, showed an effective ground attack and fine defense in stopping the courageous Cumberland red and white.

Tech had 978 total yards, including punt and kickoff returns.

"It was one of our better efforts," said Heisman.

The Yellowjackets struck fast when they recovered a fumble in the opening seconds. They had a 128-0 lead at halftime.

"We had a little trouble getting untracked," said Cumberland coach Ernest McQueen.

Tech's Heisman pointed to that early fumble as a turning point.

"It's a game of inches. If the fumble bounces their way... who knows?"

Georgia Tech did all its work on the ground and did not try a single forward pass.

"Our kids did the job on pass defense," said Cumberland's McQueen.

Cumberland completed two of 11 passes for 14 yards, lost 45 rushing and fumbled 10 times.

"I liked the looks of our passing game," said McQueen.

Cumberland, a fine baseball school in the spring, only yielded 42 points in the final period.

"Our kids were really competitive out there in the closing seconds," said McQueen.

Tech's Heisman praised the scrappy Cumberland team.

"It was just one of those days," he said. "We win today 223-0, score 22 touchdowns and gain 978 yards. You have to be a little lucky. Who knows if we play them again. On any given Saturday..."

"Our kids played their hearts out," said Cumberland's McQueen.

Aaron returns
as Brave Veep

ATLANTA — Hank Aaron returned to the Atlanta Braves today, rejoining the club as a vice president in charge of player development and the Braves' farm system.

Owner Ted Turner announced at a news conference that Aaron was rejoining the National League team after finishing up his playing career with the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League.

"Hank Aaron has an unsurpassed love for Atlanta and baseball," Turner said. "Because of his devotion to Atlanta and his loyal fans, we feel Hank can help us in the realization of our goals."

He said the home run king would be a corporate vice president of the club and would be "in charge of player development and in charge of and supervise the farm system."

Aaron, who left Atlanta after a disagreement with the former team ownership, said he was glad to be back and he felt as he did in 1954 — "like a rookie."

No beef in AL bat race

NEW YORK — American League President Lee MacPhail said Thursday he could find no evidence of wrongdoing in the misplay that enabled George Brett of the Kansas City Royals to edge teammate Hal McRae for the league batting title.

McRae charged Minnesota outfielder Steve Brye with deliberately letting a ball hit by Brett drop for a hit. Brett finished with a .333 average to McRae's .332.

"This office has questioned many people with respect to the last day of the batting race in the American League," said MacPhail in a prepared statement. "Although it is not always possible to know with certainty what governs men's actions, there is no evidence or reason to believe that any plays in the game of Oct. 3 at Kansas City were unfairly motivated. Lacking such, it is unjust to imply otherwise, simply by citing one missed play. A season of baseball includes many great plays and inevitable misplays. This office is satisfied that the American League batting championship was won on merit."

Reds tab women to throw first balls

CINCINNATI — Women are invading one of baseball's biggest ceremonial rites — the tossing out of the first pitch.

The Cincinnati Reds announced Thursday they have invited two women to do the honors when the National League playoffs between the Reds and Philadelphia Phils shift to Cincinnati next week.

Mrs. Eppa Rixey, widow of the Reds' all-time winningest pitcher, is to throw out the first ball for game No. 3 Tuesday afternoon. Her husband had 179 victories for the Reds from 1921 through 1933.

If game four is needed, Cincinnati Mayor Mrs. Bobbie Sterne will do the honors Wednesday night.

Altobelli is new Giant pilot...

SAN FRANCISCO — Joe Altobelli, one of the most successful minor league managers in the past half dozen years, Thursday was named manager of the San Francisco Giants, succeeding Bill Rigney who resigned two weeks ago.

Altobelli, a first baseman with the Cleveland Indians in the 1950s, was the dark-horse candidate for the Giants job and became available when the Baltimore Orioles decided to renew Earl Weaver's contract.

Altobelli managed the Orioles' International League farm club at Rochester since 1971 and twice won the league championship. Giants co-owner Bob Lurie brought Altobelli into a crowded news conference at Candlestick Park and hardly a newsman in the room recognized him.

...and Vern Rapp to head Cards

ST. LOUIS — Vern Rapp, who led the Denver Bears to an American Association Baseball pennant this season, Thursday was named manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rapp, 48, a native of St. Louis, replaces Red Schoendienst, fired Tuesday after 12 years as Cardinal manager.

August A. Busch Jr., president of the baseball club and board chairman of Anheuser-Busch Inc., announced the selection.

"I believe that Vern Rapp has excellent credentials to manage the Cardinals," Busch said. "As a onetime player and manager in the Cardinals' organization, he knows the long tradition and spirit of the Cardinals."

Braves name Sain pitching coach

ATLANTA — Johnny Sain, a star with the Braves when they were in Boston, Thursday was named as pitching coach of the Atlanta Braves.

Sain replaces Herm Starrette, who will become a special pitching instructor for the major league team and its Richmond farm team.

Sain was a special pitching instructor in the Braves' minor league organization last season.

Sain won 20 or more games four times when he was with the Boston Braves. In 1948 he won 24 games and, with left-hander Warren Spahn, pitched the team to the National League pennant.

NFL starts draft rule appeal

WASHINGTON — The National Football League has initiated an appeal of U.S. District Court Judge William B. Bryant's ruling that the annual college draft violate federal antitrust laws, an attorney in the case said Thursday.

Paul Tagliabue, who represents the NFL at the trial proceedings in the damage suit brought by former Washington Redskins rookie Jim "Yazoo" Smith, said notice of an appeal was filed with the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia late Wednesday.

He estimated it will be three to four months before the appellate court will hear arguments from the two sides. However, Stewart Johnson, attorney for Smith who was awarded $276,000 in damages by Bryant, said he will try to expedite the proceedings in hopes of a final appeals ruling early next Spring.

Knights avenge soccer
loss to Elk Grove, 1-0

The Prospect Knights got even with the Elk Grove Grenadiers in Mid-Suburban League soccer Thursday as they took a 1-0 decision.

"We started slowly," said Knight coach Wally Bachir of his 3-4-1 squad, "but we've been picking up. We lost to Elk Grove 3-1 the last time we played."

Knight goalie Norb Radatz sparked the Prospect defense, described by Bachir as "really great," with 16 saves.

Santiago Bustamante broke a scoreless tie at the third period with a 25-yard bullet for the winning goal.

He was assisted by Roger Consdorf. Hersey took a 5-2 knockout punch from non-league foe Barrington.

The Broncos scored twice in the first period and Hersey never recovered.

"We just couldn't buy a goal," said Hersey coach Walt Jasinski. "Several shots bounced off the goal posts."

Ivo Kamp and Bob Klaus came up with the right price for Hersey in the second and fourth periods respectively for the Huskies' only markers.

Forest View got two goals from Mike Gosczycki and one each from Wally Hegel, John Hegel and George Broussais to boost their record to 6-1-1 with a 3-0 win over Arlington.

Arlington, Hersey coast

Prospect tops
Bison in tennis

Arlington kept their lock on the top spot in Mid-Suburban League girls' tennis with a 7-0 win over Elk Grove but Prospect boosted their record to 10-1 and moved into second place with an abbreviated 5-1 win over Buffalo Grove, Thursday.

Prospect coach Jean Walker remarked, "We feel we have a lot of girls who can be seeded and we knew Buffalo Grove was an important match in that respect."

The Bison got their only point from Lisa Smart at No. 1 singles. The Knights, paced by singles players Carla Rub and Julie Schwem, took all the other matches in straight sets.

The No. 2 doubles match was halted by darkness.

Arlington made short work of Elk Grove as No. 2 singles player Janet Haherkorn had the best outing of the Cardinals, handling her opponent 6-0, 6-0.

No other Arlington entry was pushed past two sets.

Rolling Meadows held off Palatine 4-3 to improve their MSL mark to 9-2.

It was the fifth 4-3 loss Palatine has suffered this season.

Meadows got two points in singles with Barb Gallo taking a three set match at No. 1 and Kris Krueger a forfeit at No. 2.

Brenda Bell took a point for Palatine at No. 3 singles.

Nancy Gauchier was a winner at No. 2 singles for Wheeling but that was all the Wildcats could muster as they fell to Forest View, 6-1.

Forest View's record of 7-4 was aided with points from singles players Cindy Sarna and Lee Badgett.

Nancy Lachus and Jenny Kim, at No. 4, were the only Falcon doubles team to handle their opponents in straight sets.

Hersey disposed of Conant 7-0 as all seven matches went the minimum two sets.

Debby Sampson coasted to a 6-0, 6-0 win at No. 1 singles. The other two Hersey singles players, Kathy Tehon at No. 2 and Elisabeth Buck at No. 3, lost only four games between them.

Schaumburg won their second conference match of the year, 4-2 over Hoffman Estates.

Schaumburg swept the doubles competition, except the incomplete No. 4 pairing, and got their deciding point from Cindy McDole at No. 2 singles.

Harper lost an 8-1 decision to Joliet Wednesday as Barb Jacob and Denise Richards took the Hawks only point at No. 3 doubles.

In Central Suburban League action Thursday Glenbrook South edged Maine West 4-3.

Nancy Webber, at No. 1 singles, Nancy Haherkorn at No. 2 singles and No. 4 singles player Annette Arnold earned the points for Maine West.

Winless Warriors try tonight at Maine East

The Maine West Warriors will try to get into the win column for the first time this year today as they travel to Maine East for an 8 p.m. football contest.

Now 0-4, the Warriors have been plagued by both injuries and mistakes on the football field and Coach Jim Morel will be trying to overcome both this week.

"We've got guys in there who have never played before," lamented Morel, whose already small-in-numbers squad had shrunk even more since the season began. Last week, Morel had to start eight different faces, compared to his opening day lineup, and he's hopeful that the experience under combat conditions will mature his squad, and fast.

The Demons from Maine East come into the game with an impressive 3-1 record and own a share of the Central Suburban League South lead with a 2-0 conference slate.

East has topped Glenbrook South, Niles West and Waukegan East. Their only defeat came at the hands of Waukegan West.

Although 0-4, the Warriors have showed signs of promise. They dropped a close contest to Evanston, 12-7. Against Maine South, two first half mistakes gave South two gift touchdowns and West ended up losing, 21-9.

Fremd offers season sport pass

For the first time, the Fremd High School administration is issuing a Season Athletic Pass for families, individuals and students.

This pass will enable the ticket holder to attend the last two home football games, nine home basketball games, seven home wrestling meets and five home gymnastic events. This pass is not reciprocal to other schools in District 211 and also excludes tournaments and playoffs.

The cost of the family pass is $15 and will admit any combination of children and adults up to four persons. An individual adult pass is $10 and a student pass is $5.

Ticket sales will begin Tuesday at the Fremd High School Administration Office, 1000 S. Quentin Rd. from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily. Students may purchase family or individual tickets for their parents at the office. Season passes may also be purchased at the next home football game, Oct. 22 at the ticket booth. For information, call Fremd High School, 358-6222.

The Fremd Viking Booster Club and the administration hopes this will be a successful venture as other schools in the district are considering this plan.

New club opens today in Meadows

The Meadow Club, which has been described as the "most unique tennis club" in the country, opened its doors today. Club members and guests will celebrate completion of the social and tennis facilities at a series of parties to be held today and Saturday.

The club, located in Rolling Meadows within the 65-acre Gould Center, is a multi-million dollar sports complex, complete with seven indoor courts, eight outdoor courts, four squash and racquetball courts, a pool, exercise room, sauna, pro shop, attended nursery, lounge, grill and gourmet dining room with live music nightly.

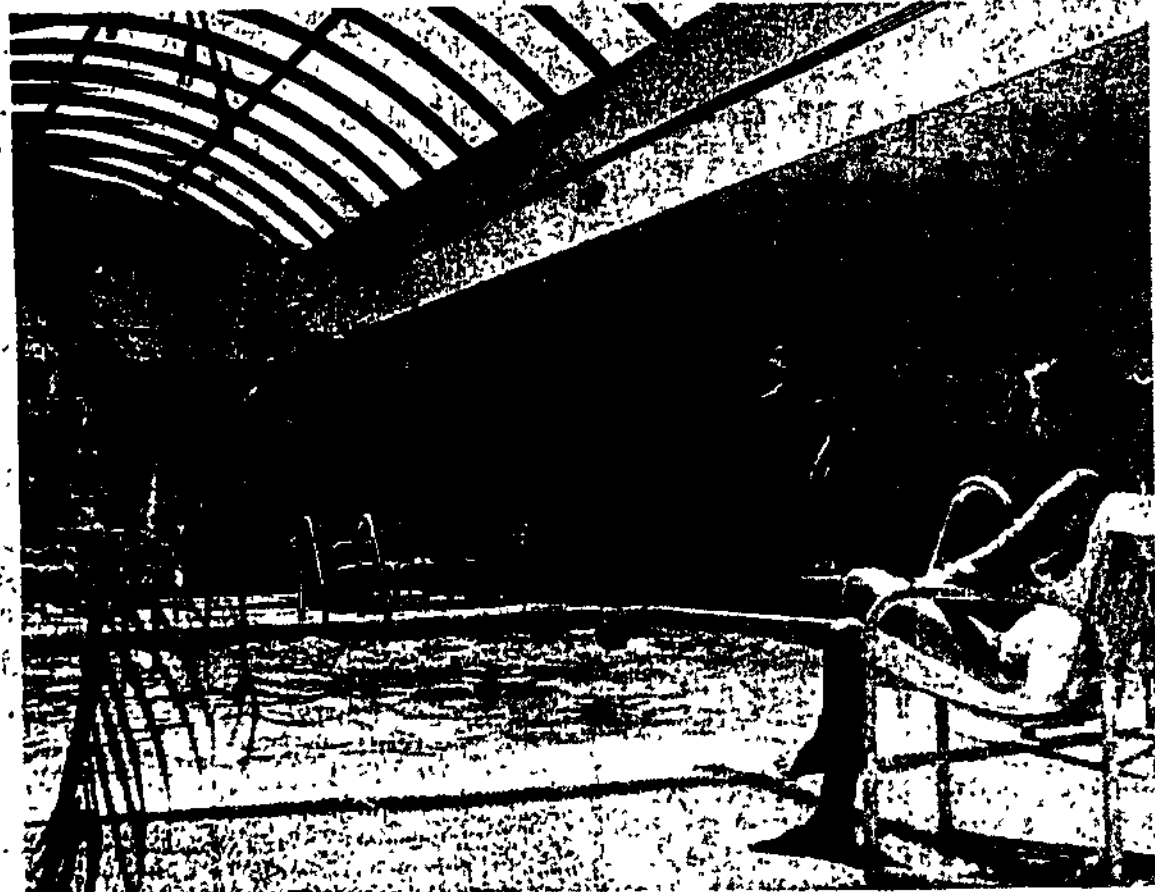

Among the club's unusual features are its luxurious furnishings, a 100-foot tennis action photo mural, a man-made lake with quarter mile jogging track around its perimeter and a gazebo set amidst the outdoor tennis courts. Facilities also include indoor practice area with closed circuit television, exercise room with professionally supervised programs to meet individual needs and a gourmet dining room with private rooms for special dinners, parties, and meetings.

The use of glass and natural plantings give an outdoor atmosphere to the club, particularly around the pool and adjacent health bar. There members may comfortably watch a giant TV wall screen and order special health drinks.

The club's membership categories include tennis members, associates who use all facilities but the racquet sports and social members who use the club's social and dining facilities.

The club has already hosted an exhibition tennis match between Cliff Richey and Dennis Ralston, two of the world's top professionals. World Championship Tennis has invited the Meadow Club to hold one of its 1977 tournaments and negotiations are under way to bring the $100,000 pro competition to Chicago.

Ted Robinson is manager of the club and Pat McKenna is the tennis professional. Instruction is available in tennis, squash, racquetball, swimming and special individualized exercise.

A popular spot for members of The Meadow Club is the heated pool and terrace.

South teams continue war

Klein said, "We'll certainly need everyone healthy against Conant."
Klein was most impressed with Conant's quickness and the running of Cougar fullback Jeff Johnson who racked up over 100 yards last week against Prospect.

We executed well and I was happy with our defense," Klein added. "It was our best technical game of the year, even though we lost."

Conant coach John Ayres agreed in the appraisal of the Mustangs, adding, "They've got an outstanding line-backer in (Tim) Jacobson and some good defensive ends."

Ayres admits the Cougars ironed out some problems in the defensive secondary which Prospect successfully exploited last week. "We've made a few adjustments and I think we'll be better. Drolet (Meadows QB Dennis) is a pretty good thrower."

Conant's injury-plagued backfield is remedied with the addition of I-back Rocky Pugliese. "He did a good job filling in," Ayres said. "I think that with a little experience, Rocky will be able to help us. Pugliese has deceptive speed."

Mistakes and points are on the minds of coaches. Bob Ferguson of Schaumburg and Fred Lusow of Forest View.

"We've got to get at least 14 points on the board," Ferguson commented. Schaumburg has been able to manage just 21 points in four games and has lost, 10-0 and 7-0, causing concern for the offense.

"We moved the ball a little against Rolling Meadows last week, but not enough," Ferguson continued. "This is not a typical Forest View team we'll be playing. They're not explosive like they used to be. They're a lot like every other team in the South — strong on defense and grind-it-out on offense."

The Saxons own the top ball carrier in the area in Steve Kauden who has rambled 493 yards plus the best defense in permitting points. Stagy Schaumburg has allowed just 22.

Dolven aces par 4!

Frank Dolven Jr., 55, scored a hole-in-one on the 318-yard par 4 16th at Villa Olivia Country Club in Bartlett. It was his first ace and also the first ever recorded on the hole. His 18-hole score was also a course record — 35-31-40. Dolven lives in Mount Prospect.

"The last couple of weeks have been frustrating," Lusow explained of the Falcons' tailspin. "We didn't make many mistakes the first two weeks of the season. We have made them the past two and they've really hurt us."

"Like us, I don't think Schaumburg has had the consistency on offense that they'd like to have."

Jim Peterson is expected to return to the Falcon lineup tonight. The line-backer-tailback has been sidelined with an injury.

Despite his envious position atop the standings, Elk Grove coach Don Schnake promised, "We'll approach it (Nitre Dame) as we would a conference game."

"We might take a look at a few players we haven't seen much of, but we're still trying to get better."

Schnake said he doesn't know much about the Dons, except that "they're big. They're a basic running team, but aren't afraid to pass." St. Viator defeated Nitre Dame, 7-0, earlier in the season. Now it's the fox's turn.

with George Orth & Roger Nick

The fluids that keep your battery, radiator, brakes, power steering, engine, and automatic transmission functioning smoothly need to be checked and replenished periodically. When you do these simple jobs, park your car on level ground. Battery electrolyte should be checked monthly in winter and weekly in summer, when its water content evaporates faster. Uncap and inspect each of the cells separately. The electrolyte must cover the lead plates in each cell. If the level is below the ring in the neck of the filler well, add tap water or distilled water.

Make sure your GM car gets the best service possible by bringing it to RAY OLDS-MOBILE, 501 Boone Hwy., Park Ridge. As the largest retail OLDS dealer in Illinois, we have the #1 service department and the most extensive parts department inventory in the area. Our staff of 20 factory-trained technicians are on hand at all times to make sure each customer is completely satisfied. Stop in and discuss your car's problems with our service managers, George Orth and Roger Nick! We are open Mondays through Fridays from 7 A.M. until 6 P.M. Call us at 496-3200.

AUTO TIP

You should pour enough brake fluid to keep both master-cylinder compartments filled to within 1/4 inch of the top.

Jerry Sloan—the last hero of an era tries to come back

by BOB GALLAS

Jerry Sloan pulled out a penknife and started to whittle during a break in the Bulls' practice.

"I'm not disappointed. I'm not crying," said the last member of the original Bulls' franchise that came into the National Basketball Assn. in 1966. "I could have gotten hurt like this my third year in the league. I've been lucky."

Once just a member of a Chicago hero stable that included Dick Butkus, game seems like the final contest of the playoffs. But Sloan has had an entire year to contemplate his future and is at peace with himself.

Now 34 years old, only Nate Thurmond of Cleveland and John Havlicek of Boston are still playing and older than Sloan. If he does play again, it would have to be with the same reckless abandon that made him one of the best guards in the league. Sloan knows no other way to play than 100 per cent.

His rehabilitation program has been stymied by fluid building up on the knee, which has been drained 18 times. As late as eight weeks ago, the knee had to be put in a cast.

"The immobility of a cast stiffened

Jerry Sloan

Gale Sayers, Ernie Banks, Billy Williams, Bobby Hull and Chet Walker, Sloan is the last playing member of that group who still operates out of Chicago. The rest have moved on elsewhere to play out the twilight of their careers. Most have retired.

But now Chicago is in danger of losing its last own proven sports hero. A knee injury that shelved Sloan most of last season may end the career of volatile Bulls' guard. But not if Sloan can help it.

"The knee looks good. The doctors are more pleased with it than I am," said Sloan, who came to the Bulls in the 1966 NBA expansion draft after spending one season with Baltimore. It's been one year since Sloan's knee has gone under the knife, but complications have kept him from regaining full strength and mobility in the knee. When, or if, he'll play again is anybody's guess.

"I haven't worried a minute about it," said Sloan, who is limited to running in a pool or on grass right now. "I'll give it a good shot and if it doesn't heal, that won't be the end of the world."

Those words are hard to believe coming from a man who plays basketball with such a passion that every

Black Hawks will be the targets

Hockey Celebrity Roast scheduled

If opposing National Hockey League teams haven't done so already, the public is invited to a hockey celebrity roast featuring the Chicago Black Hawks.

The fun-filled event will unfold Monday, Nov. 8 at St. Lambert's Parish Hall, 8148 N. Karlov in Skokie. Open bar and cocktails begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner scheduled for 7:30. All seats are reserved and cost $30 and $20.

The purpose of the attraction is to raise money for the Mike Schwass Fund. Schwass was injured during a hockey game when he was checked and sent sprawling into the boards, head first.

After surgery was required three times to correct damaged vertebrae in his neck, Mike was discharged from the hospital and now resides at home.

The proceeds from the hockey celebrity roast are earmarked to help meet the medical expenses and home remodeling.

The program will bring together some of hockey's finest players and coaches. Some of the Chicago Black Hawks, including Chairman Keith Magnuson, Stan Mikita, Phil Russell, Cliff Koroll, John Marks, Tony Expoy also, Pit Martin, Dennis Hull, Bobby Orr and Billy Reay, have agreed to be roasted by such media stars as Bill Gleason of the Sun Times, Johnny Morris of Channel 2 sports and Olympic gold medalist Ann Henning.

To add to the event, Roasters, Inc. has agreed to assist in planning and staging the entire program. Roasters, Inc. are Stu Allen and Sonny Marx, two of the fastest minds in show business. These two Prime Roasters are in big demand as a result of their many past roast performances.

Schwass, of 706 Garland Pl. in Des Plaines, is receiving therapy five times a week, but still desires to further his education.

A graduate of Notre Dame High School in Niles, he has also continued his interest in sports, especially hockey.

For more information, contact Gil Messa, Project Coordinator of Hockey Celebrity Roast at 259-3642.

the knee up again," he said. "I think most of the problems will be solved if I can just get the strength back in it."

It's obvious that now Bulls' coach Ed Badger has had to prepare for the season by fielding a team that doesn't include Sloan. But Badger leaves the door open.

"If Jerry Sloan is healthy, Jerry Sloan is a starter," Badger said simply.

But Sloan is far from being healthy. His knee is weak, perhaps longer, away from being strong enough to withstand the rigors of the NBA season. While the Bulls are out on the exhibition schedule, Sloan remains behind in Chicago, working out alone.

A member of the 10,000 point club and a career average scorer of 14 points per game, Sloan is best known for his tenacious defensive abilities, however, and is a perennial All-Defensive selection when healthy.

Basketball is sure to remain part of his life, no matter what happens to the knee, but Sloan doesn't want to discuss what he'll do after playing. Not yet anyway.

The University of Evansville, where Sloan is legend after leading the Indiana school to two small-college national championships, has a standing offer for Sloan to assume the head coaching chores there. "And there have been other offers," said Sloan.

"After 12 years I have to think of myself and my physical well being," he said. "I'm hanging in there, but it's near the end."

Builder ready soon with new Superblock plan

The Superblock developers in Des Plaines this fall will present plans to the city for the second phase of their downtown redevelopment plan, which they hope to start next year.

The second phase will be comprised of retail stores and shops and will be a continuation of a joint venture started this year by J. R. Gottlieb and Co., Chicago, and Erikson and Stevens Inc., Des Plaines.

The first phase of Superblock is comprised of a 10-story office building and a three-level enclosed shopping mall, located at Prairie and Lee Streets. The office building is scheduled for completion early next year, with occupancy of the mall expected in late spring or early summer.

MEL HELMS, vice president of J. R. Gottlieb, said the developers plan to break ground for the second phase of the project as soon as the shopping mall is completed.

The second phase, which will be located on the south side of Ellinwood Street between Center and Lee streets, will be a continuation of the shopping mall now under construction. It will be attached to a parking deck under construction by the city.

Helms said the developers are unsure how many businesses will be housed by the second phase of the Superblock development.

Before construction of the second phase is started, he said, the developers will have to tear down three buildings on the site. Two of the buildings are vacant and the third is owned by Spiegler's Dept. Store, which will be the primary tenant in the new shopping mall.

ALTHOUGH NO hearings have been scheduled with the city, Helms said the Superblock developers hope to appear before the plan commission and zoning board of appeals within a few weeks. The plans must be approved by the city before construction can begin.

"Right now we're trying to get everything ready for the hearing with the city," he said. "I'm not sure exactly when it will be."

The developers do not have a mortgage for the second phase of Superblock, he said, adding that "financing is very close."

Jerome Gottlieb, president of J. R. Gottlieb, has predicted the retail portion of Superblock will bring an additional $15 million to $20 million in business to the downtown area each year.

In addition to Spiegler's, the shopping mall will house numerous other stores and shops. The primary tenant in the office building will be the First National Bank of Des Plaines.

City renews bid to expand parking

Des Plaines is renewing efforts to obtain a downtown parcel of land owned by the park district so that the city can expand its parking lot at Prairie Avenue and Pearson St.

Mayor Charles J. Bolek said he has sent a letter to the park district asking officials to again consider allowing the city to acquire the building and land at 748 Pearson St. The building houses the administrative offices and maintenance facility of the park district.

The city attempted to buy the property for about $130,000 two years ago, but the park district wanted twice that amount. Park officials also said the district has no place to move its facilities.

IN THE LATEST attempt to obtain the land, Bolek has proposed that in exchange for the property the park district be allowed to move its headquarters to the second floor of the Des Plaines Civic Center, 1420 Miner St., and be given free rent for seven or eight years. The mayor said the park district also would be given lobby space in the civic center.

"The park district could have the land appraised," Bolek said. "Then we could allow them to occupy the second floor of the civic center rent free until the cost of the park land is accrued."

David Markworth, director of parks and recreation, said he has received Bolek's proposal, but that it has not been reviewed by the park board.

"We would like to cooperate with the city as much as possible," he said. "I think we'd be willing to sit down and talk about it, but I can't really say whether it would be acceptable to us."

He said Bolek's proposal will be considered by the park board at its Oct. 19 meeting. He said it probably will be referred to the district's building and grounds committee for study.

"WE WOULD WANT to make sure we get equal value for what we would be trading," Markworth said. "I'm not sure having to pay rent to the city after seven or eight years would be acceptable or advantageous."

Markworth said officials are not sure whether the civic center would be an acceptable location for the park district's headquarters.

"I think the civic center has its pros and cons and I think it would all depend on how it would be set up," he said. "We really haven't looked into all the advantages and disadvantages of moving over there."

Because the park district now is in the process of moving its maintenance facility to a building at 1300 Oakwood Ave., it only would be in need of storage space and offices for its administrative staff if the Pearson Street location is acquired by the city.

2 injured slightly in car collision

Two Northwest suburban residents suffered minor injuries when their cars collided in Arlington Heights, police reported Thursday.

Police said a westbound auto driven by Richard W. Hasselmann, 23, of 1054 Walter Ave., Des Plaines, sideswiped an eastbound car driven by Betty J. Taylor, 52, of 719 N. Kasper Ave., Arlington Heights.

The accident reportedly occurred at 8:10 a.m. Wednesday on Kirchhoff Road west of Vail Avenue when Hasselmann tried passing slow-moving traffic and crossed over into Ms. Taylor's lane.

Hasselmann received a slight back injury, and Ms. Taylor received cuts and a back injury, police said.

Arlington Heights firefighters transported the two to Northwest Community Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Police ticketed Hasselmann with driving on the wrong side of a roadway.

by United Press International
Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil. "This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryan Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 240 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.8 per cent to 32.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points. Among the 31.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained

Village wakes up with the shakes

Mount Prospect residents say their homes were shaken early Thursday morning, possibly by underground dynamiting by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Shirley Donaldson, 102 N. Lancaster St., said her house was shaken at about 6 a.m. "and all of the windows in the house rattled. It looked like other people on the block heard it, too, because a lot of lights went on."

Another resident, Monica McDonough, 117 Weller Ln., also said she heard a "rumbling noise" early Thursday morning. "It lasted about five seconds. The whole house shook," she said. "I thought my furnace blew up. I called the police and they said they didn't hear anything."

VILLAGE MGR. Robert J. Eppley said he has received calls from residents reporting the same kind of trouble and added, "I'll look into it."

MSD officials have said there will be some sporadic dynamiting through 1976 to complete the $35-million deep tunnel sewage project. There are eleven tunnel shafts requiring the use of dynamite.

Kenneth Gilbert, safety engineer for Healy Ball and Greenfield, contractors for portions of the deep tunnel in Mount Prospect, Thursday could not be reached to confirm the early morning blastings.

MSD Assistant Chief Engineer Robert Ansan said the contractors are authorized to blast between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. "We haven't received any complaints regarding the time of blasting, but I will check it out," Ansan said.

MSD officials have said the blasting could cause homes to tremble. However, they have said the shaking is harmless and the vibrations from each blast are tested and recorded by a seismologist.

JAMES MURRAY, MSD attorney, said he has received no complaints about the blasting and is not aware that any are being investigated. Murray said anyone with complaints or inquiries should contact the MSD.

"We can take it up with the contractors and see if something can be done about it," Murray said.

MSD officials said most of the complaints they have received in the past about blasting concerned expanded foundation cracks which once went unnoticed.

Meanwhile, Des Plaines Environmental Officer Philip Lindahl Thursday said the city is filing a complaint with the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency because of complaints by two city residents of damage to their property. The residents live near the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant under construction.

Lindahl said property owned by John Ingram, 710 W. Lincoln Ln. and Larry Allison, 707 W. Lincoln Ln. was damaged Sept. 23 at nearly the same time of the dynamite blasting at the plant site, Oakton Street and Ill. Rte. 83.

He said the city is asking the EPA to investigate the complaints to determine whether the damage was caused by the blasting.

"We want them to investigate it because we've got to prove that the blasting did the damage," Lindahl said. "We can't prove it, but nothing like this ever occurred until they started the blasting."

Newberg, Paschen and Groves is the contractor dynamiting near the plant site.

Deadline for Dist. 62 questionnaire is today

Today is the deadline for Des Plaines Dist. 62 parents and staff to return questionnaires seeking parental and staff views on district programs. Approved by the board of education in September, the questionnaire will be used by the district's new citizens' advisory committee, which is studying the long-range future of the district in view of impending financial problems caused primarily by declining enrollment and an unclear picture of future state aid allotments.

The questionnaire asks participants to rate the quality of district educational programs and district subjects and services in order of importance.

RESPONDENTS ARE asked to indicate what they would be willing to see reduced or eliminated if budget cutbacks become necessary. The choices range from increasing class size to closing school buildings.

Assistant Supt. Robert Cowell, who is in charge of the questionnaire, said he hopes to have the results tabulated, interpreted and ready for use by the advisory committee by the end of December.

About 4,250 questionnaires have been sent to parents and 455 to district staff persons, Cowell said. There has been a high rate of return among the staff, but the rate of return for parents will not be known until next week when school principals send completed questionnaires to the administration center, he said.

Parks approve merging with history society

The Wheeling Park Board Thursday gave final approval to an agreement merging the district with the Wheeling Historical Society.

The board also approved preliminary plans for moving the Historical Society Museum from 84 S. Milwaukee Ave. to Chamber of Commerce Park.

The merger allows the historical society to act as an advisory board to the park board in the distribution of museum tax funds. The district has levied a nonreferendum tax of 1.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation that will bring the district an estimated $15,000 annually.

MUSEUM TAX FUNDS collected by Village equipment to be auctioned off

If you're in the market for a 1963 street sweeper, the Village of Wheeling has a deal for you.

Village officials on Oct. 23 will sell a variety of used equipment at an auction at 10 a.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd. The items will be available for viewing beginning at 9 a.m.

Greg Peters, village administrative assistant, said the sale items include the 1963 Elgin street sweeper, an old ambulance, eight automobiles, including former police cars, one three-quarter ton pickup truck, two half-ton pickup trucks, a pavement stripper, a sewer rodder and miscellaneous office equipment.

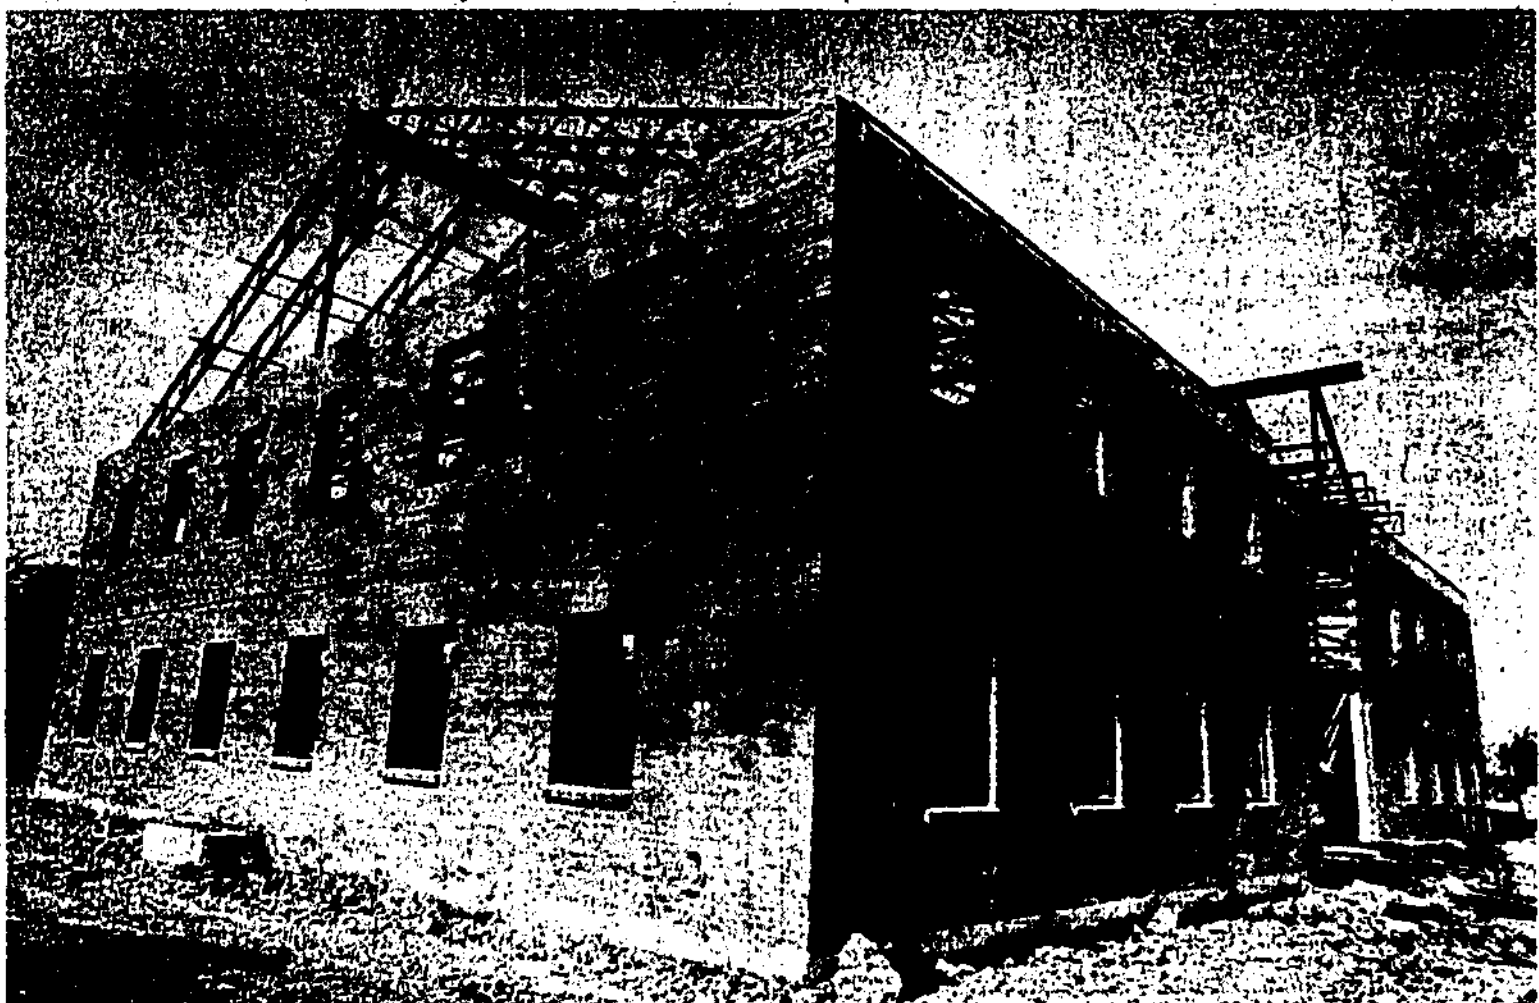

the park district will be allocated on the basis of recommendation from the historical society but only with final approval of the park board. The park board has agreed the historical society will remain separate from the park district except for yearly budget and program reviews. The society will retain control of money raised from outside fund-raising projects.

The historical society has made several recommendations for use of the museum tax funds including restoration of the Childerly Retreat House property, which the park district is attempting to purchase. David Phillips, park district superintendent, said the park district probably will be able to move the historical museum this fall from Milwaukee Avenue to Chamber of Commerce Park, 131 Wolf Rd.

He said a proposed addition to the museum could be made in the spring or at a later date, when plans and funding are available.

THE PARK BOARD has received an estimate of $3,500 to move the museum from Scherf House Movers Inc. of Barrington. Phillips said work on the moving can begin as soon as he has completed cost estimates for excavation, concrete and other necessary work.

The historical society earlier this year asked the Village of Wheeling to sell the museum to the park district so the building could be moved from Milwaukee Avenue. Society officials said they were afraid the building, the former village hall, would be torn down when Milwaukee Avenue is widened.

WHEELING TOWNSHIP officials say they hope to move into their new building at 1620 N. Arlington Heights Rd. by December.

The new town hall will cover about 7,300 square feet and have space for the North-west Mental Health Assn., Shelter Inc., and the Salvation Army's Community Counseling Center when completed. The building is expected to cost about $700,000.

Truckers violating permit: panel

Wheeling officials have charged four trucking firms using a truck terminal facility on Chaddick Drive with violating the conditions of their special-use permits by allowing trucks to use Wolf Road north of Hintz Road.

In a report to the board, the Environmental Advisory Commission said the truck companies had agreed during planning and zoning hearings not to use Wolf Road north of Hintz Road to avoid adding to traffic congestion.

The commission members said companies using the South Wheeling Truck terminal, 1875 S. Chaddick Dr., began using that portion of Wolf Road several months ago "apparently oblivious" to the provisions of the special use permit.

The companies are Gateway Transportation Co., McClean Trucking Co., Associated Truck Lines, Inc. and Mason-Dixon Trucking Line, Inc.

HOWEVER, GREGORY Peters, administrative assistant, said Village Atty. John Burke reviewed the ordinances granting the zoning and special use permits and that "the agreed upon truck routes mentioned in the various hearings were not incorporated into the ordinances, thus making them unenforceable."

Peters said Burke also believes it would be difficult to enforce the special use provisions on truck routes because Wolf Road is a state highway. He said Burke believes the village could be open to charges of discrimination for limiting the truck travel of certain companies.

Peters said he has written to the trucking companies and asked that they comply with the agreements made in 1973 about the use of Wolf Road. He said only one company, Gateway Transportation Co., has agreed to comply with the village's request.

Peters said he also has written to the state highway department asking that all heavy truck traffic be prohibited from using Wolf Road.

Mate seized in murder attempt

A Palatine man's alleged attempt to murder his wife backfired when a bomb he is accused of making blew up in his hands, police reported Thursday.

Arlington Heights detectives said they arrested William E. Fashing, 36, of 607 S. Stuart Ln., at 5:45 p.m. Wednesday, and charged him with arson and the attempted murder of his 32-year-old wife, Geraldine.

Police said Fashing suffered minor burns on his arms when the bomb he was planting in his wife's car, parked at the Northwest Medical Arts Building, 1100 W. Central Rd., Arlington Heights, exploded prematurely at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

FASHING, WHO was treated and released for burns at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, reportedly told police he had no knowledge of the bomb. Police said Fashing insisted on his innocence even after his arrest.

Police described the bomb as homemade, comprised of putty, gunpowder and .22-caliber shells. Its trigger was a spring-loaded device that detonated

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer
A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 340 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1968 vote in the area.

Most professional pollsters agree that splitting the undivided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.8 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 32.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 33.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained

Supreme Court to hear St. Viator case next week

Ruling on housing gains support: Siegel

Three racial discrimination, housing and zoning cases decided in recent months by the U.S. Supreme Court support the Village of Arlington Heights in its refusal to rezone property near St. Viator High School for a low-income housing project, according to the village attorney.

The three high court rulings are the basis of a supplemental legal brief filed recently by Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel before next week's Supreme Court hearing on the case between Arlington Heights and the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp.

Oral arguments before the court tentatively are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday, bringing to a close the five-year-old legal battle in which the village has blocked the MHDC from building a 190-unit townhouse development called Lincoln Green.

A brief filed with the court Monday by attorneys for MHDC attempts to rebut Siegel's supplemental arguments.

THE CASE WAS appealed to the Supreme Court after the 7th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled against the village in June, 1975, on the basis that its refusal to rezone the 15-acre parcel southeast of the high school would have racially discriminatory effects.

Siegel argues in his brief that the Arlington Heights-MHDC case should be considered a zoning issue and says the Hills vs. Gautreaux case decided in April, 1976, indicates local zoning must be upheld.

That case gives courts authority to order federally funded, low-income housing in the suburbs to relieve inner-city segregation. But Siegel points out the written decision in that case gives local governments the right "to reject certain proposals that are inconsistent with their approved housing plans.

Zoning and other land-use restrictions must be adhered to, according to the Supreme Court decision.

Siegel also refers to a Washington, D.C. vs. Davis case from June, 1976, in which the court ruled that proof of purpose is needed to constitute a violation of the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

THE WRITTEN decision for that case even mentions the Arlington Heights —MHDC case as one of 16 lower court decisions with which it disagrees.

"The unquestionable conclusion to be drawn from these decisions is that, in the absence of proof of purposeful racial discrimination, the mere fact a greater percentage of blacks might occupy Lincoln Green than other housing in Arlington Heights is insufficient to invalidate the zoning or-finances of the village as it affected the subject property," Siegel's brief states.

No racial motive or discriminatory practice was proven, he says.

Wills Caruso, attorney for MHDC, rejects Siegel's new arguments and argues that the only reason no racial motive was proven is because the village "fought so hard to keep this evidence out of the record."

Caruso also stresses the "overwhelming, hostile unprecedented reaction of the community against Lincoln Green, which often involved racially explicit statements and which then Village Pres. John Walsh stated, was "a mandate to reject this proposal."

CARUSO'S BRIEF states Siegel has misconstrued the Hills vs. Gautreaux decision. That opinion by the court said while municipal interests are to be considered by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, "they cannot block Congress' goal of providing for expanded low-income housing opportunities distributed throughout a metropolitan housing market."

The third case argued by the two sides in the supplemental briefs is Eastlake vs. Forest City Enterprises Inc., which involved the rights of property owners seeking rezoning.

Siegel says the Supreme Court's decision in that case recognizes that "a mere interference with the owner's plans to develop his property is insufficient to invalidate a zoning ordinance." Walsh was village president when the remarks were made in 1971.

Caruso disagrees, saying in his brief the Eastlake case does not apply to the Lincoln Green case. The Eastlake case involves procedures for establishing zoning classifications, which the Arlington Heights-MHDC case does not, he says.

Flu shot program

The Wheeling Village Board has authorized the expenditure of $250 to help finance the Wheeling-Prospect Heights swine flu immunization program.

The swine flu clinics — originally scheduled for Oct. 30 and 31 at Wheeling High School — were postponed indefinitely because of the scarcity of swine flu vaccine. Wheeling officials said no new date has been set for the clinic.

Bible study for singles

The First Baptist Church of Wheeling, Edward Street and Ill. Rte. 83, will sponsor nonsectarian Bible study for singles at 9:30 a.m. Sundays.

The class is open to single persons, widows, widowers and divorcees. For further information, call Miriam Bassett at 537-6283.

police went to Fashing's Palatine home at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday to question him. They said he gave them permission to search his house and garage.

KENNEDY SAID they found components in Fashing's garage resembling those used in the bomb.

Police transported Fashing to the Arlington Heights Police Station, where he was charged Wednesday night. Police said Fashing refused to make any statement other than maintaining he had no knowledge of the bomb in his wife's car before the explosion.

Bond for Fashing initially was set at $100,000. He appeared in the Evanston branch of Cook County Circuit Court Thursday with his attorney, Santo Volpe of Chicago, and was given a reduced bond of $10,000 by Associate Judge Milton H. Solomon.

Solomon approved the reduced bond over the objections of attorneys for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office, police said.

The court date for Fashing is Oct. 29 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court. He was turned over to Cook County Sheriff's Police following the hearing and released after posting bond, police said.

Hearing Nov. 3 on health unit bid

A request by the Northwest Mental Health Assn. to rent half of the second floor of the new Wheeling Township Hall will be the topic of a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 3 at the township hall, 1618 E. Northwest Hwy.

The association has asked for a 10-year lease at the new building, with a total rent of $40,000. The new hall, 1620 N. Arlington Heights Rd. is under construction and is expected to be finished in December.

Swine flu dates postponed

Wheeling Township officials will not reschedule swine flu vaccinations for the township's elderly and chronically ill until they are certain the vaccine will not be delayed again, Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor said.

'Meals' policy review set

The Meals on Wheels program for the elderly of Wheeling Township will undergo a policy review. Mrs. Kolerus said there are "a couple of gray areas" in the program policy needing study.

Mrs. Kolerus said one of the gray areas concerns food stamps and the meals program. She said a person complained to the township that her food stamps would be cut off if she eats under the Meals on Wheels plan, a program providing meals for shut-ins.

1,608 register to vote

Township Clerk Dorothy Hauff has reported that 1,608 persons registered to vote at the township hall between January 1 and Oct. 8. She invited voters to become familiar with the new voting machine before the Nov. 2 election. The voting machine may be seen at the township hall.

Village wakes up with the shakes

Mount Prospect residents say their homes were shaken early Thursday morning, possibly by underground dynamiting by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Shirley Donaldson, 102 N. Lancaster St., said her house was shaken at about 6 a.m. "and all of the windows in the house rattled. It looked like other people on the block heard it, too, because a lot of lights went on."

Another resident, Monica McDonough, 117 Weller Ln., also said she heard a "rumbling noise" early Thursday morning. "It lasted about five seconds. The whole house shook," she said. "I thought my furnace blew up. I called the police and they said they didn't hear anything."

VILLAGE MGR. Robert J. Eppeley said he has received calls from residents reporting the same kind of trouble and added, "I'll look into it."

MSD officials have said there will be some sporadic dynamiting through 1979 to complete the $35-million deep tunnel sewage project. There are eleven tunnel shafts requiring the use of dynamite.

Kenneth Gilbert, safety engineer for Healy Ball and Greenfield, contractors for portions of the deep tunnel in Mount Prospect, Thursday could not be reached to confirm the early morning blastings.

MSD Assistant Chief Engineer Robert Ansani said the contractors are authorized to blast between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. "We haven't received any complaints regarding the time of blasting, but I will check it out," Ansani said.

MSD officials have said the blasting could cause homes to tremble. However, they have said the shaking is harmless and the vibrations from each blast are tested and recorded by a seismologist.

JAMES MURRAY, MSD attorney, said he has received no complaints about the blasting and is not aware that any are being investigated. Murray said anyone with complaints or inquiries should contact the MSD.

"We can take it up with the contractors and see if something can be done about it," Murray said.

MSD officials said most of the complaints they have received in the past about blasting concerned expanded foundation cracks which once went unnoticed.

Meanwhile, Des Plaines Environmental Officer Philip Lindahl Thursday said the city is filing a complaint with the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency because of complaints by two city residents of damage to their property. The residents live near the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant under construction.

Lindahl said property owned by John Ingram, 710 W. Lincoln Ln. and Larry Allison, 707 W. Lincoln Ln. was damaged Sept. 28 at nearly the same time of the dynamite blasting at the plant site, Oakton Street and Ill. Rte. 83.

He said the city is asking the EPA to investigate the complaints to determine whether the damage was caused by the blasting.

"We want them to investigate it because we've got to prove that the blasting did the damage," Lindahl said. "We can't prove it, but nothing like this ever occurred until they started the blasting."

Newberg, Paschen and Groves is the contractor dynamiting near the plant site.

State EPA starts testing tap water at Willow Pk.

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has started testing tap water in the Willow Park Apartments, Prospect Heights, in response to residents' complaints.

Officials of Citizens Utilities, a private firm that supplies water to 6,200 residents of Prospect Heights and Mount Prospect, said they are unaware of a problem with the water content.

Apartment residents living in the eastern portion of Prospect Heights have complained about an oily film in their water that has persisted for the past three weeks.

PAT O'NEILL, 811 Piper Ln., said she was told by employees of the utilities company Monday that the situation could be the result of a low water level in the wells.

Mrs. O'Neill also called Prospect Heights officials who advised her to talk with the Environmental Protection Agency.

"There is an odd taste to the water and an oily film forms on the top of any standing water," she said.

"I've lived here for four years and never had anything like this. I thought it would just go away but it hasn't," Mrs. O'Neill said.

Other Willow Park Estates residents have complained about a similar water condition and also will have their tap water tested Thursday morning, she said.

"The EPA does this kind of checking from time to time. I wouldn't expect them to find anything wrong with the water when they test it," said Walter Larson, general manager of Citizens Utilities.

LARSON SAID the water condition described by the residents could be caused by new plumbing or the reaction between the water and the rod in a hot water heater in an old plumbing unit.

Larson said he has not received similar complaints from other areas served by the company in recent weeks.

"This is the first I've heard of this, but I intend to check on it this afternoon and follow up on it if necessary," he said.

Environmental Protection Agency officials who will conduct the test in the eastern section of Prospect Heights were not available Tuesday to comment on the situation or explain the testing procedures.

Interested persons may call the police department at 537-2135. The position pays $3 per hour and is part time.

Two injured slightly in car collision

Two Northwest suburban residents suffered minor injuries when their cars collided in Arlington Heights, police reported Thursday.

Police said a westbound auto driven by Richard W. Hasselmann, 23, of 1054 Walter Ave., Des Plaines, sideswiped an eastbound car driven by Betty J. Taylor, 52, of 719 N. Kaspar Ave., Arlington Heights.

The accident reportedly occurred at 8:10 a.m. Wednesday on Kirchoff Road west of Vall Avenue when Hasselmann tried passing slow-moving traffic and crossed over into Ms. Taylor's lane.

Hasselmann received a slight back injury, and Ms. Taylor received cuts and a back injury, police said.

Arlington Heights firefighters transported the two to Northwest Community Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Police ticketed Hasselmann with driving on the wrong side of a roadway.

$2,700 in Bicentennial fund to be used for park

The final $2,700 in the treasury of the Buffalo Grove Bicentennial Commission has been earmarked for the development of Bicentennial Park at Arlington Heights Road and Thompson Boulevard.

The commission voted to use the money to install a 60-foot sandbox and shrubbery in the park, which is being developed by the village and local civic organizations with private and public funds.

Work on the 3.4-acre Bicentennial Park will begin Saturday with the installation of playground equipment by village staff and volunteers. Levitt & Sons Inc., developers of the nearby Strathmore Grove subdivision, is digging the holes and pouring the concrete for the equipment. Levitt also has agreed to donate $4,300 for development of the park.

PLANS FOR the park have been developed by Ron Helms, a member of the appearance control commission. The park development is being organized by Trustee Clarice Rech.

There now is about $7,000 earmarked for the park's development. Development cost may total more than $30,000, Rech said.

The Bicentennial Commission decided not to donate any funds toward development of the Countryside Boys' Club near village hall because Village Atty. Richard Rayss said public funds cannot be given to private organizations.

The boys' club had planned to use the money for moving a clubhouse from the Cambridge-on-the-Lake apartment complex near Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads to its future site next to village hall.

BARBARA SHELTON, Countryside vice president, said the club has received enough pledges to cover the cost of moving the clubhouse, but needs funds to equip the building with educational and recreational equipment.

The clubhouse is a former office building for the apartment complex. It was donated to the club, but must be moved with club funds. It can be disassembled into three parts.

Mrs. Sheldon said the club has received three bids for moving, reassembling and erecting the building. She said the cost will be about $40,000.

Mrs. Sheldon said the club is awaiting confirmation from the Internal Revenue Service of its tax-exempt status before accepting large donations, applying for federal grants or approving bids to move the building. She said the IRS should notify the club of its status within two weeks.

MOST PLEDGES have come from large corporations, but more donations will be needed from local organizations and fund-raising events to buy equipment and to hire a full-time staff member.

The club, an affiliate of Boys' Club of America, will offer counseling and recreational services to area boys and girls. The village board agreed late in August to lease a one-acre site behind village hall near the helicopter pad to the clubhouse for a token rent of $10 a year.

Oktoberfest to have brass band, dancers

A 50-piece German brass band and German dancers will highlight the Wheeling High School Instrumental League's Bicentennial Oktoberfest Monday evening.

The Oktoberfest will be in a tent at Huns' Bavarian Lodge, 931 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, with proceeds going to the league's projects and to the bandmen. A $2 per person donation will be required. Food and drink is extra.

Music begins at 6:30 p.m. with the brass band followed by the Wheeling Wildcat Marching Band at 8:35 p.m.

Police to auction 20 bikes Saturday

The Buffalo Grove Police Dept. will auction unclaimed, abandoned bicycles at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The department has about 20 unclaimed bikes. Persons who can show proof of ownership may pick up bikes from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday.

The auction will be conducted near the water tower next to village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd. Proceeds will go to the village for general use.

by United Press International

Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil.

"This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryan Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

"It's so evident that the whole of Eastern Europe is under Soviet domi-

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer
A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 240 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.5 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 44 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1968 vote in the area.

Most professional pollsters agree that splitting the undecided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.8 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 51.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 22.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained BIG SHOT. Capt. James Hanson of the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. aims his giant "squirt gun" used in fighting blazes. The operation of pressurized water equipment is being taught in a special institute designed by Lt. Charles Kramer of the fire department.

Firemen's 'pressure' controlled

Firemen at the scene of a fire work with a great deal of pressure — water pressure that is.

Firefighters can tell you that calculating water pressure through several hoses off of one pump on the fire engine can be a tricky business. Not enough pressure and the water won't reach the fire, too much pressure and firemen risk damage to hoses and have little control in directing the water.

Often, engineers resort to mathematical charts to tell them how much pressure can be put through a certain number of hoses that are a certain length, are a specific width and have a certain type of nozzle.

If that sounds confusing, Buffalo Grove Fire Chief Wayne Winter will agree with you.

"FIRE ENGINES aren't the simple little things they used to be," he said. "They're more elaborate and more sophisticated than ever before."

Sometimes at the scene of a fire, the mathematical charts aren't where they are supposed to be. Sometimes errors are made. In all cases, the charts are an additional item for firefighters to worry about.

To ease the burden, Buffalo Grove Fire Lt. Charles Kramer developed a program which simplifies problems of water pressure so that a single formula enables firefighters to calculate mentally hose pressures at the scene.

Entitled "Fire Apparatus Driver-Engineer Training Institute," the program is a success, having graduated more than 220 fire engineers from the Northwest suburbs.

THE PROGRAM, the only one of its kind in the country as far as Kramer knows, runs 40 hours and has been in operation since last year.

"Word of mouth about our institute sure spreads," Winter said. "We're getting calls from further and further away from people wanting to know about it."

The course has been so successful that Buffalo Grove is planning to offer another course, for only 20 hours, for fire officers.

"It won't be as detailed, but it will let the officers know what an engineer knows, so mistakes will be minimized," Winter said. "It'll be like a tactics class."

Free bus tour of parks Oct. 16

A free bus tour of Buffalo Grove parks will be sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Park District Oct. 16. All interested village residents or local organizations are invited to attend. The bus will depart at 10 a.m. from the Raupp Memorial Building, 901 Dunham Ln. Participants are urged to attend an orientation meeting at 9:30 a.m. The two-hour tour is designed to evaluate future needs for park development and lead to an expansion of a community advisory council into neighborhood action groups, said Park Board Pres. Dede Armstrong.

Big water users to oppose boost in water rates

Elk Grove Village's large industrial water users will oppose the village's proposed higher water and sewer rates at Thursday's public hearing, before the village board.

Residential opposition to the proposed rates, however, does not seem as great. No residents have gone to the village hall to look at the proposed rate schedule, as of Thursday according to Fay Bishop, assistant village clerk.

Under the proposal, the water and sewer bill for an average family of four will increase 30 per cent, a small shop's would increase 60 per cent, a restaurant's would increase 176 per cent and a factory's would increase 78 per cent.

THE PUBLIC HEARING will be 8 p.m. Thursday in the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave.

"I don't think very many people are aware of the hearing," said E. William Rapp, president of the Custom Lots Homeowners' Assn., a residential area south of Cosman Road. "And those who are aware are rather resigned to it. They're so tired of having their water shut off anyway."

The latter was a reference to the village's outside sprinkling ban and low pressure earlier this summer.

Rapp said his homeowners' group, as others in the umbrella Elk Grove Estates Homeowners' Assn., are forbidden by their charter to advocate or oppose any legislation.

"WE CAN HAVE individual, grassroots efforts, but I haven't heard of any in connection with the water rates," he said.

The monthly water and sewer bill for a typical family of four would increase from $9.25 to $12.02 under the proposed rates.

However, the industrialists not only are facing higher bills, they also will be losing a rate structure which favors the larger water users. The new system calls for flat rates for every 1,000 gallons used, rather than the sliding scale rates now used.

"It's inflationary. Are we to pass it on to our customer?" asked Fred Ramer, industrial relations manager for Chicago Magnet Wire Corp., 901 Chase Ave.

CHICAGO MAGNET WIRE is the largest user of water in the village, having used 5.7 million gallons last June. Under the existing rates, the water costs $2,462.93; under the new rates, it could cost as much as $3,730.81 or 51.5 per cent more.

Ramer said his firm will object to the proposed rates because "we are a big water user" and because "we have never wasted water."

"It is our philosophy with energy not to waste any and water is energy," he said.

Lawrence Foods Inc., 2200 Lunt Ave., used much of its 685,500 gallons last June in the food it prepared for institutions, like hospitals and restaurants, and in steam for cleanup. Les Lawrence of the firm said it recycles water used in its cooling system.

"WE FULLY INTEND to pay more for water," Lawrence said, "but there are different ways the revenue could be raised. Are big users to be charged

by TOM VON MALDER and PAT GERLACH

Although Biesterfield Road will be extended to within a third of a mile of Plum Grove Road during the next 18 months, Elk Grove Village officials still are against linking the two roads.

Schaumburg officials want the link because it would provide an east-west connection with nearby Wise Road, a connection that they say would make reaching Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village easier and safer.

Elk Grove Village officials say they are fearful of the added traffic the link would bring to residential areas.

"WE (THE village board) really haven't changed our position — even informally," said Elk Grove Village Trustee Nanci L. Vanderweel.

However, Mrs. Vanderweel said she thinks her village board should take one last look at the situation because of the current traffic backups on Nerge Road, which runs east-west just south of the planned Biesterfield Road extension.

"As much as I hate to see any traffic come through on a straight shot from the west, I think we should look at a Biesterfield-Wise connection once more," she said. "I don't think Cook County will widen Nerge to four lanes for a number of years."

Schaumburg Pres. Raymond Kessell said he believes a connection of Biesterfield and Wise "makes a lot of sense from the standpoint of providing another east-west thoroughway." He said the connection he envisions would not be a "direct straight line," which would encourage speeding, but a road that would jog and turn.

"I THINK THE ROAD extension becomes very imperative to the long-range planning of the Schaumburg-Elk Grove Village area," Kessell said.

Mrs. Vanderweel said she would rather see an east-west connection provided by an upgrading of Schaumburg Road (old Ill. Rte. 53), which would allow access to the hospital by that road and Rohlfing Road. "That would be my first preference," she said.

Thomas F. Rittenbacher, Elk Grove Village building commissioner, said the Biesterfield Road extension — from Rohlfing Road west — is being built by developers as construction occurs on the vacant land along the road's proposed routes.

Some sections of the Biesterfield extension already are built, and Rittenbacher estimated it would take another year and a half to complete the road.

STARTING AT Rohlfing Road and working west, first there is an 80-acre parcel on which developer Ted Saywala plans to build single-family homes. His annexation and rezoning petition is under review by the village, but as part of the project he would have to connect Biesterfield from Rohlfing to the existing Biesterfield at the west end of his property.

From that point, Biesterfield extends to Home Avenue. The developers of the Roundtree Commons townhouses will build the north half of Biesterfield between Home Avenue and Meacham Road. The south half of the road will be built either by the developer of the northside land (there presently are no development plans), or by the village after it obtains the necessary right-of-way.

Ford backtracks on Soviet 'domination' remarks

by United Press International
Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe," he said.

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil.

"This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryan Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

"It's so evident that the whole of Eastern Europe is under Soviet domination," he said.

Maintains hefty lead over Carter

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer
A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 240 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 23 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.5 per cent to 29.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 33.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained

DON JOHNSON fillets fish at his fish market, Don's Docks, 1220 Miner St., Des Plaines. He and other small commercial fishermen now are prohibited from fishing in Lake Michigan.

Lake Michigan fishing ban didn't stop Johnsons

by DIANE MERMIGAS

There is no other way of life for Don Johnson and his family.

The state restricted commercial fishing in Lake Michigan about a year ago, limiting fishing to three large commercial operations selected each year by lottery. The severe restrictions did not force the closing of Johnson's small fish market in Des Plaines, but it keeps him from operating his boat off Illinois shores.

Johnson said the restriction raised the price of fresh and frozen fish for both the businessman and the consumer because he has been forced to buy his fish from Canada and the American coasts.

HIS WIFE AND their children work hard in their shop at 1220 Miner St. and still make a good living at what they do, which for the most part is scaling, cleaning and preparing all types of fish.

In his reserved, easy manner, Johnson never will say much about the fact that the state's action has changed his business because, actually, it has changed his entire life. Johnson's 34-year-old son, Andy, grew upon a boat that surged through the Great Lakes waters in a quest for perch.

The boat was his grandfather's, the "Daryl J," a fisherman's vessel that extended 25 feet from the bow to the afterdeck and stretched 10 feet at the beam.

TODAY THE BOAT remains docked at Washington Island, just north of Door County, Wis., where Grandfather Johnson has retired and from where the three generations of Norwegian seamen came.

It is used only for pleasure now, because Johnson and his son no longer rise with the sun at 4 a.m. to head out to Lake Michigan for a day's catch which must be cleaned and then sold.

"It was not fun, but a lot of hard work, getting up that early and working with a temperamental Lake Michigan," Johnson said.

"It was back-breaking work, repairing the nets, pulling in the tugs of fish, scaling and filleting them, then selling them in our store the same day," he said.

"BUT THERE WAS a pride that the fisherman could take in selling and serving his own catch. That's gone now," Johnson said.

The cold and miserable days of blowing wind and water were trying on a man's nerves, but the work was "rewarding," Johnson and his son agree.

There was some element of the unknown in the business back then. During the spring-to-fall fishing season, you never knew just what you'd catch each day. It could be anywhere from five to several hundred pounds of perch.

Now, Andy travels to the Fulton Avenue fish market in Chicago four times each week to buy 60-pound crates of fresh lake perch, walleyed pike, trout and smelt; frozen ocean fish like turbot or shrimp from the gulf of Mexico.

There's still the scaling and cleaning, which is part of the day-long preparation requiring the constant effort of four persons. What seems incidental, like the pouring of seafood sauce into individual containers, the folding of napkins, the smiking of potato salad and cole slaw, and the frying of fish in a family-recipe batter is not.

Sister Cheryl and Andy's wife, Donna, also help in the shop, one of three fish markets that the Des Plaines family has owned in the city during the past 16 years.

The Johnsons keep it a family business "because you can always depend on your family" and because "it takes years of work to master the art of cleaning shrimp and filleting fish," Cheryl said.

Don's Dock, as the family shop is called, sells 500 pounds of fish weekly to long-time customers, lunch-time executives, dieters who have discovered the low-cholesterol features of seafood and even to mischievous children who come in asking for shark's meat, Johnson said.

FRIDAY'S TRADITIONALLY "fish day," and things are busiest during holidays and the lenten season. The family still does a healthy business every day the store is open, Johnson said. The shop is closed Mondays.

Grandfather Johnson still passes his time in Washington Island hook and lining off the docks, but the rest of the family doesn't find recreational fishing as exciting a match as commercial fishing.

Grandfather Johnson, who came to Chicago as a young man of 18 with the ambitious dreams of a commercial fisherman, was somewhat distressed by the state's ban against such fishing more than a year ago, Johnson said.

"But, I still love my work. That ban never really threatened our existence," he said. "It just made us change our ways a little."

15 cents a pound

Beer firm to establish can recycling center

An aluminum can recycling center is being established by the Miller Brewing Co. at Town & Country Distributors Inc., 1225 Chase Ave., Elk Grove Village.

The center will be open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday at Town & Country, starting Wednesday. Whole or flattened aluminum cans will be accepted, but steel cans will not be, according to Jack Rohner, Town & Country manager.

The beer distributor will give the cans to Reynolds Aluminum for recycling and will pass along the 15 cents a pound that Reynolds pays for the aluminum to whoever brings in the cans.

"WE BELIEVE THIS program represents an excellent way to attack our solid waste disposal problem," Rohner said. "It provides a readily available recycling route and offers incentive for collection. We want to build this collection effort into a permanent and cooperative community effort."

Community organizations and individuals should call Rohner at 439-2324 if they want more information about the money-making possibilities of the recycling program.

The can recycling drop-off facility will be the first in the village although Miller Brewing Co. has set up similar facilities in other communities.

Newspaper recycling also is available locally, with the village's scavenger company, Garden City Disposal Co., Rosemont, picking up bundled newspapers left at the curbs. The program started in April.

AFTER GARDEN CITY takes out its costs, profits are turned over to the village, which has established a beautification fund with the money.

Gary E. Parrin, village administrative assistant, said $1,592.77 has been given to the village for the 130 tons of newspaper collected through August.

Parrin said the village board has not decided what to do with the money. Possibilities he listed included benches, flowerbeds and walkways on village property.

There is no bottle recycling within the village, other than sporadic efforts by civic groups. Des Plaines and Arlington Heights have drop-off centers for bottles.

The village board last February closed its paper and bottle recycling center behind the village hall because the center had lost $633.68 between May 1, 1975 and Jan. 24, 1976. There were not enough users to cover the cost of the center.

Police arrest three in drug, liquor case

Elk Grove Village police have arrested an Arlington Heights man and two Palatine sisters and charged them with possession of illegal drugs and transporting open liquor in an auto.

Police arrested Steven W. Block, 20; and Ana and Sandra Reed, both 17, in the village Wednesday. All three have been released on bond.

Police Thursday night refused to release further information pending completion of their investigation.

the same as small users?" He said this overlooks that it should be costing less to get water to the larger users.

"You reach a point where it is reflected in increased costs of what you produce," Lawrence said.

Lawrence Foods faces a typical increase, based on June's usage, of 76.9 per cent from $300.97 to $532.43. It is the village's 18th largest water user.

E. Stanley Klyber, executive vice president of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce, said the association has hired water rate specialist of Chicago to study the proposed 18th Consoer Townsend & Associates rates.

"WE WILL TESTIFY at the hearing but we have taken no position yet," he said.

All members of the association have been notified of the hearing, Klyber added.

There has been no increase in water rates since the system was established by Centex Corp. about 20 years ago. The village purchased the system from Centex in 1963, but did not change the rates. The proposed rates were submitted by John B. Black, a consultant hired by the village.

Village officials say they need the higher rates because increased costs and unexpected repairs have depleted the system's financial reserves. They also say the flat rate for usage is more equitable.

For Schaumburg Township system

Branch library creates increase in new patrons

The opening of a branch library in Hoffman Estates has generated a substantial number of new patrons for the Schaumburg Township Library, a survey shows.

The library, taken in two parts during September, shows a third or more of the branch library's patrons had never or rarely used the main library in Schaumburg before the branch opened last April.

Of those answering the questionnaire, 31 per cent surveyed in early September and 41 per cent surveyed later in the month, said they never or rarely used the main library before.

Many persons using the branch appear to be doing so instead of going to the main library.

In late September, 63 per cent said they never or rarely use the main library now that the branch is open, compared to 54 per cent in the early part of the month.

LIBRARIAN Michael Madden says, however, branch library patrons are using the facility more often than they do the main library.

"The users of the branch library who did use the main library before the branch library opened, use the branch far more frequently than they ever used the main library," he said.

"From 41 per cent to 48 per cent of (the) branch users come to the library weekly. Before the branch opened, only from 18 per cent to 19 per cent of this group visited the library weekly."

Madden said the survey confirmed what library officials had suspected about uses of the branch library, 409 Hassell Rd. There were no major surprises, he said.

"The survey was very positive," he said. "We were really happy with it."

THE SURVEY was offered to persons who visited the branch library during September. In some cases, Madden said, it was handed out to patrons; in other cases, it was available at the circulation desk for patrons who wanted to fill it out.

While the branch has taken some patrons away from the main library, 32 W. Library Ln., Madden indicated the decline has not been great.

"There is a slight leveling out at the main library," he said, "But it started before the branch library opened."

If anything, he said, the branch library has helped spark new interest in library services.

Although there are no figures on how many persons have visited the library, Madden placed the average monthly circulation of books and other items at 5,000 to 6,000 at the branch.

AT THE MAIN library, he said, circulation has been averaging 42,000 to 44,000. That is a drop at that library from the 48,000 circulation a year ago.

But Madden said circulation was dropping at a 7 to 9 per cent rate per month in January and February.

The combination of the two libraries has returned circulation back up to last year's level, he said.

Other findings of the survey include:

- Fifteen to 19 per cent of those surveyed in September were using the branch library for the first time, five months after it opened.

- Discounting the first-time patrons, 8 to 9 per cent said they rarely use the branch library, 7 to 15 per cent said they use it monthly, 35 to 37 per cent said they use it once a month and 41 to 48 per cent said they use the library at least once a week.

Women learn to be real 'greasers'

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Nancy Watron came home with dirt on her hands Wednesday night.

Her hands have been dirty before, of course. What housewife's hands aren't from working in the yard or cleaning around the house?

This was a different kind of dirt, however, the kind that tends to stay despite soap and water.

But Mrs. Watron didn't mind. She didn't even mind when her family kidded her about it. The dirty hands represented something to her.

"I REALLY FELT like I had accomplished something, that I had learned something," she says.

What had she accomplished? She had just changed her first tire.

Mrs. Watron, 165 Flagstaff Ln., Hoffman Estates, is the maternal part of a mother-daughter team that has enrolled in the women's mechanics course of the Hoffman Estates Park District.

She and 17-year-old Mary Ann are two of the 10 female members of the class, which has had 70 students since

by United Press International
Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil.

"This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryann Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

"It's so evident that the whole of Eastern Europe is under Soviet domination," she said.

Maintains hefty lead over Carter

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer
A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 240 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-4-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1968 vote in the area.

Most professional pollsters agree that splitting the undecided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.3 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 33.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained

Domenico gets SUP deputy post

Frank Domenico, 703 Kemah Ln., has been named deputy chairman of the Schaumburg United Party, Village Pres. Raymond Kessell said Thursday.

Kessell, elected party chairman at an Aug. 5 caucus, said Domenico will be responsible for the "day-to-day" functions of the party.

Domenico was one of three independents who challenged the Republican controlled Schaumburg Township Board of Auditors in the 1973 election when he was defeated for a four-year term as auditor.

HE SUCCEEDED Judy Round, 322 Carver Ln., who resigned as deputy party chairwoman in June.

Kessell said Domenico also is expected to take an active role in "preparing for and organizing" the party's

Frank Domenico

Nov. 4 convention at the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd.

The convention will nominate three candidates to carry the party's banner in the April village election.

At stake are trustee posts held by Herbert J. Aigner, Raymond LeBeau and Neil Hornstrom.

LeBeau and Hornstrom have said they will seek second terms. Aigner, who two years ago said he would not seek a third term, recently told The Herald he will become a candidate unless business travel prevents him from serving as "an effective" village official. Aigner is in the fire insurance business.

LeBeau was elected to a four-year term in 1973 and Hornstrom won a two-year term in 1975.

TWO YEARS AGO the Schaumburg United Party was challenged for the first time in the 20-year history of the village by a second party, Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress.

Although the new party failed to capture any board posts, its leaders say the group has remained active and will field three candidates in the spring election.

Known as Schaumburg United Party since 1971, the nucleus of the party has elected all candidates who have served on the village board since soon after the incorporation of the village in 1856.

Retired Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher was named party chairman soon after SUP was formed in 1972. Atcher, however, stepped down as chairman when he left office in 1975.

Kessell had served as party chairman under Atcher for several years.

Kessell said a list of convention officials will be released within the next two weeks.

It was begun by the park district last fall.

They aren't in the course because they want to rebuild old racecars or become professional mechanics or do realignment work on the family car.

MRS. WATTRON SAYS she enrolled because she just wants to learn something about cars, because it might be a good thing to know if she's traveling along a country highway some night and the radiator heats over.

Mrs. Wattron's interest began when one of her five sons returned from an auto-diesel class in Denver, Colo., earlier this year.

"He mentioned that it wouldn't hurt for me to learn," she says.

She also figured it wouldn't hurt for her daughter to learn because Mary Ann uses the car more than she does. So Mrs. Wattron proceeded to talk her daughter into taking the class.

There is a more subtle reason for interest, Mrs. Wattron concedes, but she says it isn't the most important.

THAT REASON is "the high cost of being ripped off."

A woman has trouble on the highway, drives into a strange service station for help and the attendant's reaction could be: we've struck gold!

All service stations aren't that way, and the one that regularly services the Wattrons' cars isn't, Mrs. Wattron says. But if a woman has some general knowledge of what's wrong, when she has to pull into an out-of-the-way station, she's less susceptible to being charged for work that didn't have to be done.

"At least you know what's wrong,"

Police arrest three in drug, liquor case

Elk Grove Village police have arrested an Arlington Heights man and two Palatine sisters and charged them with possession of illegal drugs and transporting open liquor in an auto.

Police arrested Steven W. Block, 20; and Ann and Sandra Reed, both 17, in the village Wednesday. All three have been released on bond.

Police Thursday night refused to release further information pending completion of their investigation.

she says. She doesn't envision the class changing her life style. In six weeks, she points out, there is only so much you can learn.

BUT IT SHOULD help with the three cars in the family where "every week you turn around, and something's going wrong."

While Mrs. Wattron doesn't consider herself particularly handy, she does try to help with painting the house, or hanging wallpaper or putting in cabinets.

"We try to do things ourselves," she says.

And now, that includes changing a tire if one goes flat. Mrs. Wattron says she can do that, although she doesn't have the quick hands of a mechanic; Mary Ann even can take on some of those mechanics.

"She did real good," Mrs. Wattron recalls. "She was like a pro. I was kind of stumbling around a little bit, but she was like a pro."

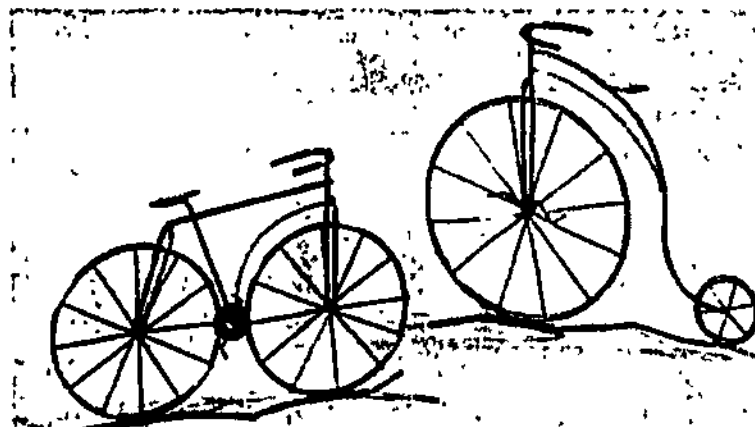

And, Mrs. Wattron said, she'll at least know where the jack is and how it's bolted into the trunk when she needs to get it.

"Before," she observes, "I had no idea what a jack even looked like. And that's the truth."

4 hurt in separate car accidents

Three suburban residents suffered minor injuries and a fourth was admitted to an area hospital following two unrelated accidents Thursday in Hoffman Estates, police reported.

Ruth Armstrong, 53, of 412 Park Blvd., Streamwood, reportedly suffered a cut chin and possible back and internal injuries shortly before 3 p.m. Thursday when a car she was driving

Hoffman Estates firefighters transported Ms. Armstrong and Ms. Kroening, who suffered cuts and bruises, to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Ms. Armstrong was admitted for treatment and reported in good condition Thursday night. Ms. Kroening was treated at the hospital and released.

Firefighters said Donna L. Wemtz, 26, of 725 Huntly Ct., Schaumburg, suffered head pain, a sore shoulder and scrapes and bruises after a car she was driving collided with a truck at Barrington and Higgins roads shortly after 10 a.m. Thursday.

The driver of the truck, Donald G. Swanson, of Darien, reportedly was

EVEN A BUDDING gourmet cook has to take time out from the kitchen and cookbooks on occasion. Erin Winn, 8, left, and Dina Shaw,

5, of Rolling Meadows who take part in a cooking class offered by the park district for kids in first through third grade, go in for a bit of light reading while they wait for the teacher to arrive. Another five-week course begins Nov. 2.

Library worry about tax rate 'unfounded'

Concerns of Rolling Meadows Library Board members that they will be unable in 1977-78 to increase the present 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation tax rate to 29 cents are "unfounded," City Atty. Donald M. Rose said Thursday.

However, Rose and the city clerk's office have been unable to present written proof to the library board that the results of the February referendum approving the tax hike have been recorded properly with the Cook County tax assessor's office.

Library officials insist they intend to obtain that written proof from Rose or the city officials.

THEY SAID THEY can't get the written proof from county tax officials and that they are concerned about the library's ability to raise its tax rate next year.

"I don't know what kind of written assurance they want from me or anyone else, but their fears are a bit silly and unfounded," Rose said.

However, library officials said they will send a registered letter to Rose requesting that he provide proof in the form of a receipt that the referendum results are properly recorded with the county.

Rose said the referendum results are recorded and that the city probably has a receipt from the county clerk's office proving the referendum results were received.

AT THE HERALD'S request, City Clerk Mrs. Elizabeth Houldsworth searched for the receipt and said it could not be located.

At a glance . . .

The following is a chronological sequence of events following the February library tax referendum:

• Feb. 28. Voters approved a library referendum that allows it to raise its present tax rate of 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation to a maximum of 29 cents.

• Aug. 3. Library board members approved a $778,000 budget for fiscal 1977-78, representing a 66 per cent increase over this fiscal year, in anticipation of receiving an increased tax rate.

• Late August. The library board learned city officials used a smaller budget submitted earlier and that the tax rate is to be based on the smaller budget.

• Sept. 10. Library officials agreed that they will not receive an increase in the tax rate until 1978-79.

123 permits issued; $27,011 collected

Building record set in September

September was a record month for building in Rolling Meadows, says John Hennessy, public works superintendent.

The city building department issued 123 building permits and took in $27,011 in building permit fees during the month of September, Hennessy said.

"This represents more than $1 million of construction, the total assessed valuation for that month," he added.

Hennessy said a majority of the new construction permits were issued to Zale Construction, developers of Meadow Edge, a single-family subdivision west of Plum Grove Road, south of Kirchhoff Road.

"The builder took out 12 permits to build homes that are selling for $47,000 and up," said Hennessy.

In addition to the single-family development, the department issued 107 permits for minor remodeling jobs, three for new garages and one industrial remodeling permit.

Hennessy said in 1975 the total assessed valuation of new construction was $320,750 and the department received $9,074 in permit fees.

"This September, in contrast, represents a very good month and I guess shows the trend back to single-family building," Hennessy said.

by United Press International
Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 13,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT, cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also has Soviet troops stationed on its soil.

"This is the situation in all the other East European countries and we don't see any improvements in that situation," the NATO official said.

IN PARIS, Maryan Czarnecki, leader of the Polish Free Veterans Assn., said Ford's statement "will cause an uproar everywhere."

"It's so evident that the whole of Eastern Europe is under Soviet domination," he said. (Continued on Page 9)

Maintains hefty lead over Carter

Poll hints of Ford landslide here

by STEVE BROWN
Herald Political Writer

A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 240 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.6 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 voters nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 30 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

Most "professional" pollsters agree that splitting the undivided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

When the 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1968 vote in the area.

Most "professional" pollsters agree that splitting the undivided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.3 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.6 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 22.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained (Continued on Page 9)

In St. Viator case

Recent rulings support housing decision: Siegel

Three racial discrimination, housing and zoning cases decided in recent months by the U.S. Supreme Court support the Village of Arlington Heights in its refusal to rezone property near St. Viator High School for a low-income housing project, according to the village attorney.

The three high court rulings are the basis of a supplemental legal brief filed recently by Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel before next week's Supreme Court hearing on the case between Arlington Heights and the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp.

Oral arguments before the court tentatively are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday, bringing to a close the five-year-old legal battle in which the village has blocked the MHDC from building a 190-unit townhouse development called Lincoln Green.

A brief filed with the court Monday by attorneys for MHDC attempts to rebut Siegel's supplemental arguments.

THE CASE WAS appealed to the Supreme Court after the 7th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled against the village in June, 1975, on the basis that its refusal to rezone the 15-acre parcel southeast of the high school would have racially discriminatory effects.

Siegel argues in his brief that the Arlington Heights-MHDC case should be considered a zoning issue and says the Hills vs. Gautreaux case decided in April, 1976, indicates local zoning must be upheld.

That case gives courts authority to order federally funded, low-income housing in the suburbs to relieve inner-city segregation. But Siegel points out the written decision in that case gives local governments the right "to reject certain proposals that are inconsistent with their approved housing plans."

Zoning and other land-use restrictions must be adhered to, according to the Supreme Court decision. Siegel also refers to a Washington, D.C. vs. Davis case from June, 1976, in which the court ruled that proof of purpose is needed to constitute a violation of the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

THE WRITTEN decision for that case even mentions the Arlington Heights—MHDC case as one of 18 lower court decisions with which it disagrees.

"The unquestionable conclusion to be drawn from these decisions is that, in the absence of proof of purposeful racial discrimination, the mere fact a greater percentage of blacks might occupy Lincoln Green than other housing in Arlington Heights was insufficient to invalidate the zoning ordinances of the village as it affected the subject property," Siegel's brief states.

No racial motive or discriminatory practice was proven, he says.

Willis Caruso, attorney for MHDC, rejects Siegel's new arguments and argues that the only reason no racial motive was proven is because the village "fought so hard to keep this evidence out of the record."

Caruso also stresses the "overwhelming, hostile unprecedented reaction of the community against Lincoln Green, which often involved racially explicit statements and which then Village Pres. John Walsh stated, was 'a mandate to reject this proposal.'"

CARUSO'S BRIEF states Siegel has misconstrued the Hills vs. Gautreaux decision. That opinion by the court said while municipal interests are to be considered by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, "they cannot block Congress' goal of providing for expanded low-income housing opportunities distributed throughout a metropolitan housing market."

The third case argued by the two sides in the supplemental briefs is Eastlake vs. Forest City Enterprises Inc., which involved the rights of property owners seeking rezoning.

Siegel says the Supreme Court's decision in that case recognizes that "a mere interference with the owner's plans to develop his property is insufficient to invalidate a zoning ordinance." Walsh was village president when the remarks were made in 1971.

Caruso disagrees, saying in his brief the Eastlake case does not apply to the Lincoln Green case. The Eastlake case involves procedures for establishing zoning classifications, which the Arlington Heights-MHDC case does not, he says.

Mate seized in attempt to put bomb in wife's car

A Palatine man's alleged attempt to murder his wife backfired when a bomb he is accused of making blew up in his hands, police reported Thursday.

Arlington Heights detectives said they arrested William E. Fashing, 36, of 607 S. Stuart Ln., at 5:45 p.m. Wednesday, and charged him with arson and the attempted murder of his 32-year-old wife, Geraldine.

Police said Fashing suffered minor burns on his arms when the bomb he was planting in his wife's car, parked at the Northwest Medical Arts Building, 1100 W. Central Rd., Arlington Heights, exploded prematurely at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

FASHING, WHO was treated and released for burns at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, reportedly told police he had no knowledge of the bomb. Police said Fashing insisted on his innocence even after his arrest.

Police described the bomb as homemade, comprised of putty, gunpowder and .22-caliber shells. Its trigger was a spring-loaded device that detonated while Fashing was planting the bomb. The bomb reportedly was armed to explode at the slightest jarring.

Detectives Pat Kennedy and Gerry

Bosenhofer of the Arlington Heights police went to Fashing's Palatine home at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday to question him. They said he gave them permission to search his house and garage.

KENNEDY SAID they found components in Fashing's garage resembling those used in the bomb.

Police transported Fashing to the Arlington Heights Police Station, where he was charged Wednesday night. Police said Fashing refused to make any statement other than maintaining he had no knowledge of the bomb in his wife's car before the explosion.

Bond for Fashing initially was set at $100,000. He appeared in the Evanston branch of Cook County Circuit Court Thursday with his attorney, Son-tolo Volpe of Chicago, and was given a reduced bond of $10,000 by Associate Judge Milton H. Solomon.

Solomon approved the reduced bond over the objections of attorneys for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office, police said.

The court date for Fashing is Oct. 29 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court. He was turned over to Cook County Sheriff's Police following the hearing and released after posting bond, police said.

Library fear over tax 'unfounded' office also told The Herald the results of the referendum, which set the legal rate that can be determined next year, were recorded in June, approximately four months after the referendum.

The spokesman also said the city should have received a receipt from the tax office.

Although Rose, Mrs. Houldsworth and former City Clerk Mrs. Elizabeth Brissenden agree that the receipt should be on file, none could say whose duty it was to record the referendum.

Rose said the city clerk probably sent in the referendum results, but he didn't know which clerk had done it. MRS. BRISSENDEN SAID she believes Mrs. Houldsworth took care of the matter, and Mrs. Houldsworth says she was not city clerk at the time.

In the meantime, Mrs. Houldsworth said the tax office has assured her a receipt certifying that the referendum is recorded is being forwarded to the city.

Library Board Pres. Rodney Dahlin commenting on the mixup, said, "Our action Tuesday night when we agreed we needed written proof is self-explanatory. We are only attempting to make sure the proper procedures were taken," he said.

YES, MARY ANN, there is dirt on your hands. She Hoffman Estates Park District in cooperation with Millex Tune Up Center, 809 W. Higgins Rd., Schaumburg. Since the program began last fall, 70 area women have participated.

Women learn to be real 'greasers'

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Nancy Watron came home with dirt on her hands Wednesday night.

Her hands have been dirty before, of course. What housewife's hands aren't from working in the yard or cleaning around the house?

This was a different kind of dirt, however, the kind that tends to stay despite soap and water.

But Mrs. Watron didn't mind. She didn't even mind when her family kidded her about it. The dirty hands represented something to her.

"I REALLY FELT like I had accomplished something, that I had learned something," she says.

What had she accomplished? She had just changed her first tire.

Mrs. Watron, 165 Flagstaff Ln., Hoffman Estates, is the maternal part of a mother-daughter team that has enrolled in the women's mechanics course of the Hoffman Estates Park District.

She and 17-year-old Mary Ann are two of the 10 female members of the class, which has had 70 students since it was begun by the park district last fall.

They aren't in the course because they want to rebuild old racecars or become professional mechanics or do reassignment work on the family car.

MRS. WATRON SAYS she enrolled because she just wants to learn something about cars, because it might be a good thing to know if she's traveling along a country highway some night and the radiator heats over.

Mrs. Watron's interest began when one of her five sons returned from an auto-diesel class in Denver, Colo., earlier this year.

"He mentioned that it wouldn't hurt for me to learn," she says.

She also figured it wouldn't hurt for her daughter to learn because Mary Ann uses the car more than she does. So Mrs. Watron proceeded to talk her daughter into taking the class.

There is a more subtle reason for interest, Mrs. Watron concedes, but she says it isn't the most important.

THAT REASON is "the high cost of being ripped off."

A woman has trouble on the highway, drives into a strange service station for help and the attendant's reaction could be: we've struck gold!

All service stations aren't that way, and the one that regularly services the Watrons' cars isn't, Mrs. Watron says. But if a woman has some general knowledge of what's wrong, when she has to pull into an out-of-the-way station, she's less susceptible to being charged for work that didn't have to be done.

"At least you know what's wrong," she says.

She doesn't envision the class changing her life style. In six weeks, she points out, there is only so much you can learn.

BUT IT SHOULD help with the three cars in the family where "every week you turn around, and something's going wrong."

While Mrs. Watron doesn't consider herself particularly handy, she does try to help with painting the house, or hanging wallpaper or putting in cabinets.

"We try to do things ourselves," she says.

And now, that includes changing a tire if one goes flat. Mrs. Watron says she can do that, although she doesn't have the quick hands of a mechanic; Mary Ann even can take on some of those mechanics.

"She did real good," Mrs. Watron recalls. "She was like a pro. I was kind of stumbling around a little bit, but she was like a pro."

And, Mrs. Watron said, she'll at least know where the jack is and how it's bolted into the trunk when she needs to get it.

"Before," she observes, "I had no idea what a jack even looked like. And that's the truth."

Elk Grove water hike opposed

Elk Grove Village's large industrial water users will oppose the village's proposed higher water and sewer rates at Thursday's public hearing, before the village board.

Residential opposition to the proposed rates, however, does not seem as great. No residents have gone to the village hall to look at the proposed rate schedule, as of Thursday according to Fay Bishop, assistant village clerk.

Under the proposal, the water and sewer bill for an average family of four will increase 30 per cent, a small shop's would increase 60 per cent, a restaurant's would increase 176 per cent and a factory's would increase 78 per cent.

THE PUBLIC HEARING will be 8 p.m. Thursday in the municipal building, 801 Wellington Ave.

"I don't think very many people are aware of the hearing," said E. William Rapp, president of the Custom Lots Homeowners' Assn., a residential area south of Cosman Road. "And those who are aware are rather resigned to it. They're so tired of having their water shut off anyway."

The latter was a reference to the village's outside sprinkling ban and low pressure earlier this summer.

Rapp said his homeowners' group, as others in the umbrella Elk Grove Estates Homeowners' Assn., are forbidden by their charter to advocate or oppose any legislation.

"WE CAN HAVE individual, grassroots efforts, but I haven't heard of any in connection with the water rates," he said.

The monthly water and sewer bill for a typical family of four would increase from $8.35 to $12.02 under the proposed rates.

However, the industrialists not only are facing higher bills, they also will be losing a rate structure which favors the larger water users. The new system calls for flat rates for every 1,000 gallons used, rather than the sliding scale rates now used.

"It's inflationary. Are we to pass it on to our customer?" asked Fred Ramer, industrial relations manager for Chicago Magnet Wire Corp., 901 Chase Ave.

CHICAGO MAGNET WIRE is the largest user of water in the village, having used 5.7 million gallons last June. Under the existing rates, the water costs $2,462.93; under the new rates, it could cost as much as $3,730.81 or $1.5 per cent more.

Ramer said his firm will object to the proposed rates because "we are a big water user" and because "we have never wasted water."

"It is our philosophy with energy not to waste any and water is energy," he said.

Lawrence Foods Inc., 2200 Lunt Ave., used much of its 635,500 gallons last June in the food it prepared for institutions, like hospitals and restaurants, and in steam for cleanup. Les Lawrence of the firm said it recycles water used in its cooling system.

Library celebrates 1st anniversary

by LUISA GINETTI

First anniversaries are always special occasions, and for officials of the Palatine Public Library the cause for celebration centers around a $1.3 million building and a year highlighted by growth and general expansion of services.

Figures tell the story of the new library's first year: 4,145 new members, a 24 per cent increase over the previous year; circulation of 321,742, a 43 per cent jump from last year; and a 20 per cent increase in the size of the library book collection since last year, from 67,509 to 81,416.

Increases also have come in other areas, including tripling the library's record collection, the creation of map and slide collections, and the addition of new tape cassettes and recorders. Slide and film projectors, which can be checked out, also have been added to the library's equipment. An increase in the number of magazine subscriptions brings to about 500 the total number of periodicals available.

ANDREA BALCKEN, administrative librarian, said the expansion has generated an increased use in the library. "We're giving people better access to what we have and there's so much better use of what we had," she said.

"We had a lot in the old building but because it was so crowded, people didn't know where to go to get it. We were fighting the building but now the building works with us."

In addition to the increased use of library materials, Miss Balcken said the new building has enabled the library to provide more programs and community availability because of its three meeting rooms.

A variety of lecture series and films have been offered in the past year, and Miss Balcken said attendance at the functions has been good.

Regular use of the library meeting rooms, a free service, has included groups such as the Palatine Historical

by United Press International

Apparently stung by furious public reaction, President Ford Thursday modified his Wednesday debate statement on Soviet domination of Eastern Europe by saying he will never "concede" that domination.

Ford also ordered the Commerce Dept. to make public the reports filed from now on by U.S. companies involved in the Arab economic boycott of Israel. The order would cover only future reports and would not identify those firms that have complied with the boycott in the past, as Ford seemed to suggest during Wednesday's debate.

Most criticism of Ford stemming from the debate, however, focused on Ford's statement that "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe and there never will be under the Ford administration."

AMERICAN VOTERS of East European background, academic specialists in Soviet affairs and news commentators in West European nations expressed astonishment and outrage. Ford reacted by reinterpreting what he had meant to say without acknowledging what he did say.

"Last night in the debate, I spoke of America's firm support for the aspirations for independence of the nations of Eastern Europe," he told a rally of 15,000 persons at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

"The United States has never conceded and never will concede their domination by the Soviet Union."

Acknowledging, in effect, that the Soviets do dominate the area, the President said: "I admire the courage of the Polish people and have always supported the hopes of Polish Americans for their ancestral homeland."

"It is our policy to use every peaceful means to assist countries in Eastern Europe in their efforts to become less dependent on the Soviet Union and to establish closer ties with the West."

AMERICA'S allies agreed Ford "made a big boo-boo" in his foreign policy debate with Jimmy Carter on Eastern Europe. One British newspaper said Ford was "dumb."

Although no one wanted to be named on record criticizing the President, both NATO officials and diplomats privately expressed dismay at Ford's remarks. Supporters tried to explain what Ford "meant to say."

"We think he made a boo-boo," one NATO official said. "The impression is that he didn't express himself very well, that what he said was not exactly what he was trying to say."

In the debate, the second between the presidential candidates and covering foreign and defense policies, Ford responded to a question on allegations that the United States had given the Soviets concessions. "There is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

THE PRESIDENT cited Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as examples of "independent, autonomous" countries.

"Ford is going to have a lot of explaining to do," another NATO official said. "He made a real bad one."

"Yugoslavia has not been in the Soviet orbit for 30 years," the official said. "Romania gets away with an independent foreign policy, although internally it's virtually Stalinist."

"But Poland is completely subject to the Soviet Union, both economically through Comecon (the Communist bloc's Common Market) and militarily through the Warsaw Pact. It also

A news analysis

There are developing signs that Northwest suburban residents will give President Ford the same sort of landslide victory accorded recent GOP presidential candidates when they go to the polls Nov. 2.

This observation comes from an examination of results of The Herald's poll taken after the second presidential debate Wednesday.

The poll, which gauged the reaction of nearly 300 persons selected in a scientific random sample, showed Ford with a clear 52.8 per cent majority if the election had been held Wednesday. His Democratic opponent, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, received the support of 25 per cent of those responding to a question about whom they would vote for if the election were held Wednesday.

Carter wins Roper poll, 40-30%

An Elmo Roper poll of 300 viewers nationwide showed 40 per cent thought Carter won, 30 per cent favored Ford and 30 per cent called it even.

After the first campaign debate on domestic issues, Roper called Ford the winner by 39 to 31 per cent.

Scattered newspaper surveys of local readership, including those of the

Washington Star and the San Francisco Examiner, also gave Carter the nod this time.

In Lexington, Ky., Carter won an 8-to-1 verdict among debate coaches attending a debating tournament.

Political supporters of the two candidates predictably called it for their own man, without exception.

WHEN THE 22.4 per cent of those who claimed to be undecided is divided evenly among the two candidates, Ford receives nearly 64 per cent of the vote, two points less than the average obtained by Richard Nixon in the 10th and 12th Congressional districts in 1972 and 4 points over Nixon's 1968 vote in the area. Most professional pollsters agree that splitting the undecided respondents is a valid method of measuring reaction and is generally considered a conservative technique.

A comparison of the responses gathered by The Herald from the first two debates indicates the President's support is growing, and the growth is not directly tied to reaction to the debates. This comes as something of a surprise to observers who singled out the historic Kennedy-Nixon debate as a decisive factor in the 1960 presidential election.

Persons who viewed the second debate favored Ford 40.8 per cent to 28.3 per cent for Carter as the debate winner. However, 52.8 per cent said they would have voted for Ford if the election were held Wednesday night.

WHEN ASKED WHO they would have voted for after the last debate, respondents gave both Ford and Carter a gain of from three to four points.

Among the 33.4 per cent of the persons questioned by The Herald who did not view the debate, Ford gained (Continued on Page 9)

Society and the village board. EXPANSION OF the children's department and the children's collection has been the result of a substantial increase in use of the library by youngsters. Miss Balcken said that of the 43 per cent general registration increase in the library's first year, 56 per cent of that figure was in the children's category.

More students also are using the library because of the increased study space, creating the need for a larger nonfiction and research collection, she said.

The library, because of the increased use, must spend a greater portion of the funds set aside for book purchases to buy extra copies of books.

"We've spent most of the year trying to get organized with new cataloging systems and new systems for check outs," Miss Balcken said. "A lot of the time has been spent just getting settled," she added.

"It's been a very exciting year to see what library service really can offer a community and to get people to realize what is here," she said.

In the year to come, Miss Balcken said the library plans to continue its efforts to expand both the book collection and services available to patrons.

With a potential for as many as 120,000 books, Miss Balcken said the library still has a lot of growing to do.

4 injured in separate car accidents

Three suburban residents suffered minor injuries and a fourth was admitted to an area hospital following two unrelated accidents Thursday in Hoffman Estates, police reported.

Ruth Armstrong, 43, of 412 Park Blvd., Streamwood, reportedly suffered a cut chin and possible back and internal injuries shortly before 3 p.m. Thursday when a car she was driving collided with a car driven by Victoria Kroening, 20, of 1203 Sterling, Palatine, at Bartlett and Golf roads.

Hoffman Estates firefighters transported Ms. Armstrong and Ms. Kroening, who suffered cuts and bruises, to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Ms. Armstrong was admitted for treatment and reported in good condition Thursday night. Ms. Kroening was treated at the hospital and released.

Firefighters said Donna L. Wenzel, 26, of 726 Huntly Ct., Schaumburg, suffered head pain, a sore shoulder and scrapes and bruises after a car she was driving collided with a truck at Barrington and Higgins roads shortly after 10 a.m. Thursday.

The driver of the truck, Donald G. Swanson, of Darien, reportedly was not injured.

Firefighters transported Ms. Wenzel to Northwest Community, where she was treated and released.

Police arrest three in drug, liquor case

Police arrested Steven W. Block,

20, and Anna and Sandra Reed, both 17, in the village Wednesday. All three have been released on bond.

Police Thursday night refused to release further information pending completion of their investigation.

Village wakes up with the shakes

Mount Prospect residents say their homes were shaken early Thursday morning, possibly by underground dynamiting by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Shirley Donaldson, 102 N. Lancaster St., said her house was shaken at about 6 a.m. "and all of the windows in the house rattled. It looked like other people on the block heard it, too, because a lot of lights went on."

Another resident, Monica McDonough, 117 Weller Ln., also said she heard a "rumbling noise" early Thursday morning. "It lasted about five seconds. The whole house shook," she said. "I thought my furnace blew up. I called the police and they said they didn't hear anything."

VILLAGE MGR. Robert J. Eppley said he has received calls from residents reporting the same kind of trouble and added, "I'll look into it."

MSD officials have said there will be some sporadic dynamiting through 1979 to complete the $35-million deep tunnel sewage project. There are eleven tunnel shafts requiring the use of dynamite.

Kenneth Gilbert, safety engineer for Healy Ball and Greenfield, contractors for portions of the deep tunnel in Mount Prospect, Thursday could not be reached to confirm the early morning blastings.

MSD Assistant Chief Engineer Robert Ansani said the contractors are authorized to blast between 6 a.m.

and 6 p.m. "We haven't received any complaints regarding the time of blasting, but I will check it out," Ansani said.

MSD officials have said the blasting could cause homes to tremble. However, they have said the shaking is harmless and the vibrations from each blast are tested and recorded by a seismologist.

JAMES MURRAY, MSD attorney, said he has received no complaints about the blasting and is not aware that any are being investigated. Murray said, anyone with complaints or inquiries should contact the MSD.

"We can take it up with the contractors and see if something can be done about it," Murray said.

MSD officials said most of the complaints they have received in the past about blasting concerned expanded foundation cracks which once went unnoticed.

Meanwhile, Des Plaines Environmental Officer Philip Lindahl Thursday said the city is filing a complaint with the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency because of complaints by two city residents of damage to their property. The residents live near the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant under construction.

Lindahl said property owned by John Ingram, 710 W. Lincoln Ln. and Larry Allison, 707 W. Lincoln Ln. was damaged Sept. 28 at nearly the same time of the dynamite blasting at the plant site, Oakton Street and Ill. Rte. 63.

He said the city is asking the EPA to investigate the complaints to determine whether the damage was caused by the blasting.

"We want them to investigate it because we've got to prove that the blasting did the damage," Lindahl said. "We can't prove it, but nothing like this ever occurred until they started the blasting."

Newberg, Paschen and Groves is the contractor dynamiting near the plant site.

Employees get CPR training

All Mount Prospect village employees soon will be trained in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, thanks to the local fire department.

The firefighters have been conducting CPR sessions in the community for the past several years and have trained hundreds of village residents. A number of lives have been saved because of the knowledge and preparedness the course provided.

Normally, CPR requires four hours of training but the material has been condensed to a solid concentrated two-hour session. The first group of village employees attended the instruction Monday afternoon. The class will be held once each week for the next four or five months.

Fire Chief Larry Pairitz said, "Small groups of eight to ten people will attend each session. That way we can provide a really quality course."

The two-hour training course is mandatory for all 225 village employees and will be provided during hours in the Trustee Room of Village Hall.

FIRE CHIEF Larry Pairitz has been appointed chairman of the Fire Prevention Committee, Great Lakes Division, International Assn. of Fire Chiefs. The Committee is composed of two members each from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Modestly, Pairitz commented, "I got the title because of the fine job our men do in fire prevention."

THE UNIVERSITY of Illinois Symphony will perform at Prospect High School Friday at 9:15 a.m. The student orchestra is performing six concerts in the Chicago area during a two-day period.

FORMER MOUNT Prospect residents Ruth and Roy Hammond were in town last weekend visiting old friends and neighbors. The couple moved to Bramson, Mo., seven years ago and two years ago relocated in a retirement development in Green Valley, Ariz.

The Hammonds are well remembered by many local residents for the wide publicity given their Mount Prospect home because of its solar energy heating system. When the house was built, Roy was an engineer with Commonwealth Edison Co. He helped develop the system that uses the sun's rays for household heat. The home, located at Milburn Avenue and Wilke Street, since has had its heat system converted to a conventional method.

The Hammonds were guests of Al and Edna Stahnke, 1 E. Hawthorne Ln., Prospect Heights, during their visit.

THE SOUL PURPOSE, a musical group of young people from Mount Prospect's Northwest Covenant Church, has been invited to sing at Chicago's North Park Covenant Church, Sunday, Nov. 7 at 7 p.m.

State EPA starts testing tap water at Willow Pk.

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has started testing tap water in the Willow Park Apartments, Prospect Heights, in response to residents' complaints.

Officials of Citizens Utilities, a private firm that supplies water to 6,200 residents of Prospect Heights and Mount Prospect, said they are unaware of a problem with the water content.

Apartment residents living in the eastern portion of Prospect Heights have complained about an oily film in their water that has persisted for the past three weeks.

PAT O'NEILL, 811 Piper Ln., said she was told by employees of the utilities company Monday that the situation could be the result of a low water level in the wells.

Mrs. O'Neill also called Prospect Heights officials who advised her to talk with the Environmental Protection Agency.

"There is an odd taste to the water and an oily film forms on the top of any standing water," she said.

"I've lived here for four years and never had anything like this. I thought it would just go away but it hasn't," Mrs. O'Neill said.

Other Willow Park Estates residents have complained about a similar water condition and also will have their tap water tested Thursday morning, she said.

"The EPA does this kind of checking from time to time. I wouldn't expect them to find anything wrong with the water when they test it," said Walter Larson, general manager of Citizens Utilities.

LARSON SAID the water condition described by the residents could be caused by new plumbing or the reaction between the water and the rod in a hot water heater in an old plumbing unit.

Larson said he has not received similar complaints from other areas served by the company in recent weeks.

"This is the first I've heard of this, but I intend to check on it this afternoon and follow up on it if necessary," he said.

Environmental Protection Agency officials who will conduct the test in the eastern section of Prospect Heights were not available Tuesday to comment on the situation or explain the testing procedures.

Fire department boosters plan benefit raffle

The Mount Prospect Fire Dept. Boosters plan to hold a month-long raffle later this month, to raise funds for needed equipment for the village's fire prevention bureau.

Raffle tickets are expected to go on sale — two for $1 — from any booster on Oct. 20. The drawing for a color television will be Nov. 17.

The boosters were organized earlier this year by Susan Jenkins, who saw a need to raise more money for educating the public in fire safety. Mrs. Jenkins said the money collected from the raffle specifically will be sent for slide projectors needed by the fire prevention bureau for preparing multi-media shows used in the schools throughout the village.

After the raffle, the boosters are planning a contest for local high school students to design a logo for the new non-profit organization. A $25 prize will be awarded the designer of the best logo.

For further information, call Mrs. Jenkins, 398-0535 or Pam Douglas, 956-6562.
